VERDICTS ON 8 NAZI SPIES DUE TONIGHT

Recommendations For Death Or Imprisonment Will Go to President.

ARGUMENTS CLOSING

Decision of Supreme Court Bolsters War Powers Of Roosevelt.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Final arguments—only barrier to the opening of deliberations by the "lawfully constituted" military commission on the guilt or innocence of eight Nazi saboteurs—resumed this morning.

It was expected the arguments would be completed by mid-afternoon at the latest and that the commission's verdict, with recommendations for execution or imprisonment of the guilty, will go to President Roosevelt for review tonight or tomorrow.

The arguments were under way yesterday when the supreme court issued its momentous decision holding that the military commission was "lawfully constituted."

Defense counsel is scheduled to complete its final argument during the morning session and Attorney General Francis Biddle, head of the prosecution, is expected to conclude the government's case by mid-afternoon.

The death penalty will be demanded for at least seven of the defendants—those who appealed to the supreme court for writs of habeas corpus on grounds they were being tried illegally. It was not certain whether the same penalty will be sought for the Eighth—George John Dasch, who reportedly turned government witness.

Meantime, legal experts believed the supreme court's decision in rejecting the seven saboteurs' appeal would make it possible for anyone accused of impeding the war effort to be denied access to civil courts and brought before a military tribunal.

The court ruled that the charges of sabotage involved in the present proceedings warrant a military trial; that the special commission was "lawfully constituted" and that the defendants were held in "lawful custody."

Under this language, it was said, anyone committing an act of sabotage or espionage, or who otherwise acted to obstruct the war effort, conceivably could be ordered before a military commission. Such persons then, would find

Defense Classes Get Taste of Tear Gas at Bellville

Civilian defense classes in four southern Richland county villages got an idea of what a gas attack is like last night when real tear gas bombs were used in a demonstration on the Bellville school ground.

The bombs were out-moded ones supplied by Sheriff Frank E. Robinson and fired from the sheriff's gas gun by Deputy Glenn Freeman of Bellville.

Sixty pupils in civilian defense classes in Bellville, Butler, Lucas, and Lexington participated in the show while a large number of spectators

Gets Life In Reformatory Murder Case

He's Second to Receive Murder Sentence Here Within Week.

Ernest Moore, a 19-year-old Kentucky-born inmate of the Mansfield reformatory, heard Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston sentence him to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary today for stabbing a fellow inmate to death in the institution the night of June 1.

Moore was the second defendant in four days to be sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Huston. John Johnson, 42, colored, Mansfield, was sentenced Wednesday after he was found guilty by a jury of fatally stabbing his wife, Mary. He also was sentenced on a second-degree charge.

Moore who confessed fatally stabbing Charles Dickerson, 31, of Licking county, with one section of a pair of scissors, pleaded guilty today to a second-degree murder charge which was reduced from first degree by Acting Prosecutor John C. O'Donnell.

Moore previously pleaded innocent to the first degree indictment and was ready to stand trial Attorney J. H. Gongwer was appointed by the court to defend him.

Conviction of first degree murder carries a mandatory death penalty unless the jury recommends mercy. The maximum for second degree murder is life imprisonment with a chance of parole for good behavior.

Asked by Judge Huston if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, Moore shook his head and replied: "I haven't anything to say."

"You evidently thought the other fellow (Dickerson) did something wrong that entitled you to get even with him, but this matter of trying to 'get' the other man never gets you anywhere but in trouble," Judge Huston told him.

After the stabbing, which oc-

BAN LOOMS

WPB Ready to Bar Electric Utility Expansions.

WASHINGTON — (INS)— A war production board order was virtually ready for issuance today banning all further electric utility expansions for the duration because of the critical copper shortage.

Chief effect of the order will be to halt construction of more than a score of Rural Electrification administration projects throughout the nation.

It was learned that private utilities have virtually completed all of their expansion projects. A WPB order was issued last March permitting the use of critical materials for those undertakings which were 40 per cent complete on Dec. 5.

Soviets Report Germans Using Six-Barreled Mortar.

MOSCOW — (AP) — A six-barreled German mortar was reported today to have made its debut on the Bryansk front.

The Soviet information bureau said one of these mortars, presumably intended to lay down a patter of six mines where the standard would hurl but one at a time, was among damaged and destroyed Nazi equipment found by the Red army men after a four-day battle southwest of Moscow in which they killed about 300 Germans.

AKRON — (U.P.)— Ned Huff, 46, drew the first conviction under Akron's new blackout ordinance.

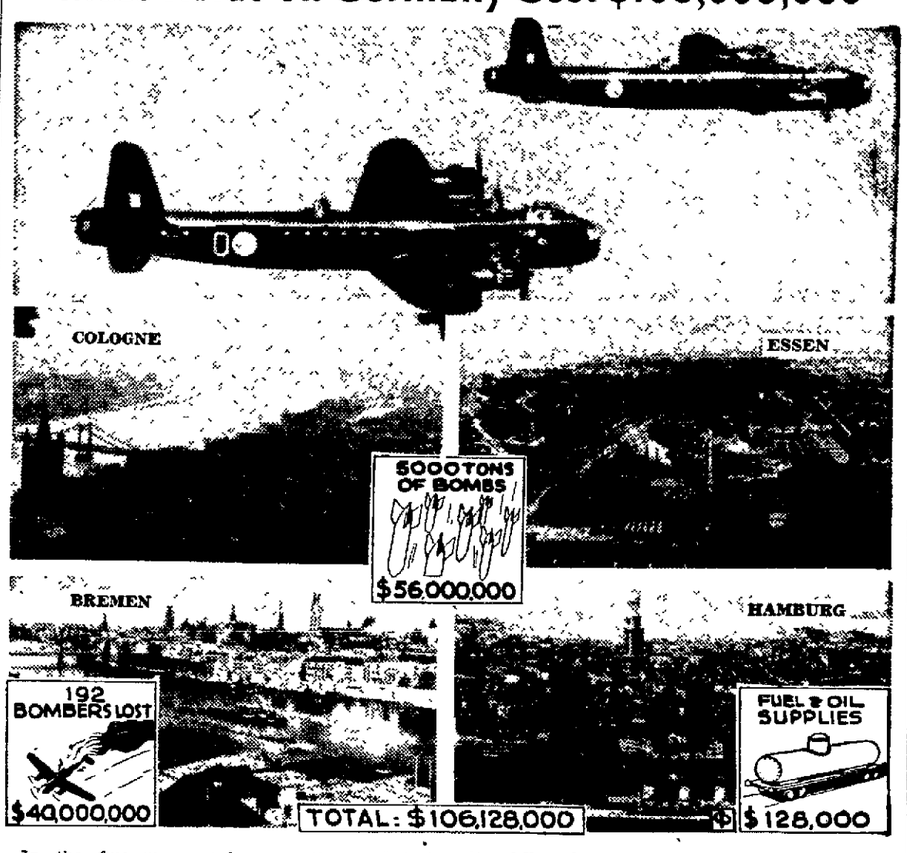
Mass Raids on Germany Cost $106,000,000



In the five mass raids on German cities which preceded last night's 600 plane attack on the war industry city of Dusseldorf the British spent $106,128,000 according to unofficial estimates. The photographs and figures above show how the costs were distributed.

300 Watch as Children Enact Storybook's 'Sleeping Beauty'

By ESTHER SMITH

An audience of more than 300 taxed the capacity of South park pavilion and overflowed to the outside to see the Children's theater performance of "The Sleeping Beauty" last night.

Threats of storm failed to daunt either the audience or the children. The program opened amid flashes of lightning and the rumble of thunder. Fortunately, no rain fell at the park during the entire performance although the neighborhood a few blocks away received a downpour.

The delightful old fairy tale of a young princess who fell into a deep sleep and did not awaken for 100 years until a prince came to claim her was colorfully presented under the direction of Harold McCuen.

A guest ballet of 26 from Ethyl Battin's dancing studio interpreted the dream of the princess during the latter's long sleep and added generally to the pictorial beauty of the performance.

Mrs. Battin, a former Radio City Rockette, presented the high spot of the ballet performance when she executed a sprightly waltz in a glittering pink costume. Other dance soloists were tiny Sally Lou Zieger, Marcia Fay Wagenhals and Florence Ullrich.

The play was presented against a courtly background that had been designed by Miss Ruth Dukes of the faculty and executed by the Children's theater workshop.

Sally Rusk appeared as the lovely young princess who fell under the evil spell of the wicked fairy when she touched a spindle.

PROBE GASOLINE 'BLACK MARKET'

OPA Told 'Cheated Fuel' Sold For Dollar a Gallon.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— OPA officials today were investigating a new type of "black market" in which gasoline is being sold at $1 a gallon.

It was reported truck drivers on well traveled roads were being cheated out of two or three gallons when they ordered service station attendants to "fill her up."

The gasoline thus accounted for by the truck driver's "S" coupon, but not delivered, is then said to be sold to persons holding lower cards.

Truckers Collect $185 For Scrap, Abandon Truck, Flee.

Two Fort Wayne truck drivers have gone "all out" in the scrap metal defense drive. "That's for sure" declared A. R. Koomler, Hoosier junk dealer who arrived in Mansfield today in quest of his errant chauffeurs.

Koomler told police that William Dalton, 18, and Robert Dalton, 27, abandoned a truck here Thursday after delivering a cargo of scrap metal to the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company for conversion into munitions of war.

The pair collected $185, Empire officials told Koomler and Police Lieut. Carl J. Kalstein and Patrolman Donald Mitchell. Their abandoned truck was found in front of 173 East Fourth street. A woman residing nearby told police she saw the drivers leave the vehicle and walk off toward the business district Thursday noon.

HITS M'GREGOR ON WAR ISSUES

Dockery Claims Primary Foe 'Playing Politics' During 'Dangerous Times.'

"Harry McGregor has played politics with war issues," declared Colonel Oliver H. Dockery, Newark, in discussing his incumbent rival's congressional record at the first public campaign rally in Mansfield yesterday evening.

Dockery is seeking the Republican nomination for congress from the 17th district. He lashed out at McGregor, who is completing his first full term in congress, declaring "McGregor's record on the prosecution of the war has not met with by approval, or the approval of voters with whom I have come in contact."

Advising the 50 or more persons who assembled in Radio City hall, that they should select for congress a person "safe, sane and dependable in these dangerous times," Dockery cited his five-war record as qualifying him for the office. "We must win this war or perish, and nothing else matters now," he declared.

Introduced at the rally were John L. Catlett, seeking re-nomination on the Republican ticket as state representative, and John C. Friday and C. L. Shoup seeking the G. O. P. nomination for county commissioners.

30 BOMBERS LOST

Fighter Planes Make Other Attacks on Freight Yards, Blast Six Locomotives.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (U.P.) — British bombers during the night dropped more than 150 two-ton "block buster" bombs and 100,000 incendiaries on the great German industrial center of Dusseldorf in what the air ministry said today was "probably the most concerted RAF attack since the war began."

(By United Press)

LONDON — Hundreds of Britain's biggest bombing planes rained explosive and incendiary bombs on Dusseldorf in the heart of the German Rhenish-Westphalian war industry area, in a concentrated one hour attack during the night.

An admitted loss of 30 bombers indicated that well above 600 planes engaged in the attack.

In addition Royal Air Force planes in intruder operations heavily bombed enemy air fields in Holland and Belgium, to keep night fighter planes down, and fighter planes attacked railroads in northern occupied France.

The loss of one fighter brought the night's total toll to 31 planes in this new phase of a Royal Air Force non-stop offensive which had entered its third day.

(Berlin reported 26 bombers shot down in the Dusseldorf raid, 16 shot down in big British light-plane raids on the Abbeville area of the French occupied coast yesterday, and one plane shot down near Cherbourg, for a total of 43.)

Panama, Brazil Lose Ships In New Attacks by U-Boats.

(By Associated Press)

The associated Press count of announced Allied and neutral ship losses in the western Atlantic since Dec. 7 was 406 today, with yesterday's navy announcement of the sinking of a Panamanian vessel and disclosure of Brazil's 11th ship loss of the war.

Sinkings announced in July totaled 79. This represented successful U-boat attacks over a period of many weeks.

In a message to the Argentine naval ministry, that country's tanker Tacito said it had rescued 17 survivors of the Brazilian freighter Barbacena (4,772 tons) off the northern coast of Brazil. The message said nothing of missing crewmen.

Reds Slash Foe In North, Fall Back In South

Fail to Prevent Enemy Break-Through Toward Caucasus Oil Centers; Soviet Soldiers Told All Who Retreat Will Be Shot, Red Star Hints.

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—Front line dispatches today reported a battering attack on Axis forces caught in a blazing forest on the Don river front where the Russians—warned to hold or die—forced the enemy back several miles on the Kletskaya sector northwest of Stalingrad but failed to prevent a break-through toward the Caucasus oil centers.

Details of the fighting by massed tanks, low-flying air squadrons and Cossack cavalrymen as well as a hint by the Red Star, army organ, that any soldier retreating without orders would be shot indicated the fury of the battles. Dispatches gave the impression that Axis losses were mounting against steadier Soviet resistance but that the danger to the Caucasus life line was undiminished.

(The Germans claimed capture of the Salsk river junction, 112 miles south of the Don, and said they were within 50 miles of the Tikhoretsk junction.)

A number of German tank divisions, including the 22nd, was destroyed on the Kletskaya front, 70 miles from Stalingrad, and the enemy was pushed back several miles by combined Soviet tank and airplane attacks that put the 113th German infantry division to flight.

This operation, following repulse of Nazi tank wedges south of Kletskaya, appeared to relieve the greatest threat to Stalingrad, at least for the moment.

Farther south, on the Tsimlanskaya sector, where the Germans broke across the Don river in southern arm of their pincers against Stalingrad, the Red army artillery set fire to a forest in which enemy tanks, infantry and automatic riflemen were concentrated. Repeated enemy attempts to break out were shattered.

On the front south of Bataisk and Rostov, however, it was acknowledged that the Axis advance continued despite heavy counter-attacks by Cossacks which drove back the enemy on some sectors. This German drive is aimed toward Tikhoretsk and is heavily backed by tanks and armored units, some of which were repulsed by Soviet artillery when they attempted an encircling operation near the Sea of Azov coast.

Red Star, which necessarily prints the opinion of the highest Soviet officials, said:

"The Red army hasn't the right to retreat any farther. History and the people will not pardon a further retreat. No position must be abandoned while one man is still alive."

It recalled, significantly, two incidents:

The first concerned 28 Soviet infantrymen who died to the last man last winter trying to halt a

DIGGING IN: 10,000 Japanese Seek Firmer Hold on Aleutians

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Official navy disclosure that some 10,000 Japanese troops are believed to be in the western Aleutians was accepted today as evidence that the enemy apparently is attempting to consolidate its position in the island chain.

According to a navy spokesman, probably one-half of the force was believed encamped on the three islands now known to be in Japanese hands—Attu, Kiska and Agattu. The other half was believed to be aboard ships in the area.

Considering the small size of the islands, military experts believed the invasion troops represent a fairly formidable holding force. And size of the concentration was regarded as evidencing Japanese desires to retain their established foot-hold in the new world.

There is no evidences yet that the Japanese have extended their operations beyond the three islands already occupied.

Delegate Anthony J. Dimond of Alaska reported he had been informed unofficially that the enemy may have landed on the Pribolof islands about 250 miles north of Dutch Harbor but the navy spokesman, in reply to inquiries, said that "we are not in a position to say that they aren't there but we have no evidence that they are."

The navy's position, he said, was supported by aerial reconnaissance over the islands, whose several hundred inhabitants were evacuated some time ago.

"We believe that not more than 10,000—probably one-half ashore and one-half afloat—are there," the spokesman said.

Naval experts pointed out that maintenance of such a force in the Aleutians was a costly task. They said that Japan had to supply everything its troops used in that area by boat over several thousand miles of unprotected sea routes. Everything the troops ate or shot, their clothing, fuel and even their living accommodations, had to be brought from Japan.

Already the Japanese have paid a comparatively heavy cost for their incursion. Eight of their

SCORE: Allied Planes Damage Jap Cruiser, Transport, Bases

(By United Press)

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Allied planes, raiding over a 2,500 mile front, have attacked and probably hit a Japanese cruiser, scored hits on a big transport and heavily damaged land targets, a communique said today.

Striking back after widespread Japanese raids in the Australian zone, Allied planes extended their attacks from Amboina island in the Netherlands East Indies, where they attacked the cruiser, to Guadalcanal island in the Solomons where they made direct hits on the transport and a supply dump and bombed enemy installations.

In the only enemy raid reported in the Australian zone a Japanese plane dropped one bomb during the night nine miles from Mossman, on the northeast coast of the continent.

Allied planes flew 660 miles north of Darwin, the north coast base, to attack the Japanese cruiser. They sighted it south of Amboina, the former Dutch naval base at the eastern end of the Netherlands Indies.

It was believed that the cruiser, moving through the Banda sea between Amboina and Timor, was moving supplies and reinforcements to enemy bases in Timor island.

In the northeastern zone, Allied

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Joe Broadway, Then and Now

HERE we are, with the shootingest year in all history more than half shot and breathing hard. Looking back at last New Year eve seems a far away glance into the past.

Kilgallen

Our temper was growing short then and we were just beginning to get the idea that America was in the middle of a terrible holocaust and times were going to change a devil of a lot before the mess was cleaned up.

January was the month you looked around for a certain able-bodied youth, but found he had just left for Dix or Upton. Every time you turned around another half-dozen splendid young chaps were wearing khaki or blue. Even if you didn't turn around, there they were.

So, as I say, TIME has been caught in a whirlwind these past six or seven months, but nothing has changed more than those lads who left Broadway for the armed forces. You might say because I'm not a lad or out there training or fighting, I'm not qualified to say, but I know what those lads have left behind. I'm thinking of the Broadway boys now, you know. Of those who left it all so that they could come back to it all.

For instance, Joe Broadway only a few days ago strode along the Stem in a $75 suit, flashed a Sulka tie, a fat bankroll and pale-faced smile, dropped into Spinrad's for tonsorial maneuvers which ran him a good $3.50, and then breezed into the Hickory House or Toots Shor's for a steak dinner that set him back a good many two-bits.

Then, what happens? Bang, the draft! He's wearing a cotton shirt and trousers and he just got a 35c military haircut that makes him look a little strange and scared. Steaks are something he saves up for now, his wallet bulges, but only from the memory of evacuated greenbacks, and he runs like murder to get to the front of chow line to see what shape potatoes are in today. The fastidiousness that marks the Stork, 1-2-3, or Barberry Room is absent from mess hall. He's just one of the boys getting in trim for the fray, not for the nearest conga line or scavenger hunt.

Back in New York he could see all of Broadway any time he wanted to; now Joe has to be content with a periodic slice of it in the form of a USO Camp Show. . . . He used to pay 99c to see a first-run picture, but he can buy a book of ten tickets for $1.40 that allows him to see ten first-run pictures. Of course the seats are harder than the Music Hall or the Capitol, but then times are harder, too, so who's kicking?

Joe Broadway used to get a kick out of dropping into Lindy's on his way home at six a. m. He gets a kick now at six a. m., too. It's his sergeant extricating him from his bunk for dat debbil reveille. Joe never got enough of the rhumba at Morocco or La Martinique. Four nights a week, sometimes. Now, he has to plead for a ticket to get into the weekly Service Club dance and when the orchestra goes into its nightly rhumba numba, it's a cinch Joe either gets cut in on or is dancing with a girl who thinks the rhumba is just a fox trot with a Latin accent.

Remember how Joe used to slouch over his drink at the bar of Fefe's Monte Carlo? You ought to see him now. Straight as a pin. A real, ruddy complexion and looking 100 per cent more the man he wants to be. Joe was a taxi bug around town, too. He couldn't walk around the block without hailing a hack.

Yesterday Joe walked 22 miles and when he came back to camp he said he felt tired, but he was rather surprised and proud. He never knew his legs had 22 consecutive miles in them!

Young J. Broadway has learned a new sense of values this year. You've heard those stories of Broadway friendships. Tradition has it that you can count your friends there on one finger. Well Joe went a long way from home and he started to get lonesome and he began to appreciate for the first time all the good things he left behind. He started writing to a couple of gals and guys and before he knew it, they answered. It's a merry correspondence now and when Joe gets back to Broadway he's going to feel a lot different about the friends he never knew he had.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Station wagons still run around town with facetious insignia such as "No Tengo Rancho" and "No Rancho Yet" but for a growing list of movie stars the kidding no longer applies.

The return to the soil hasn't reached the point where all Hays' chillun got ranches, but more and more are thinking in terms of acreage and dreaming sentimentally of bumper crops of alfalfa, citrus, nuts or home-grown peas.

The Hollywood ranch isn't the joke it used to be. When the glamour gal of other years wearied of her colossal town house with its marble baths and expensively boring swimming pool parties, she bought herself an acre in the country, put a fence around it, and posed for the photographers—in dungarees, dainty rake in hand, among her tomatoes. She generally made coy revelations as to how expensive a business her "ranching" was and she really shouldn't afford it, she said, but after all it was a relief to get away from the artificiality of it all and worth it.

HOLLYWOOD'S new type farmer is like Ginger Rogers—serious about it. When Ginger bought her ranch near Medford, Ore., last year, Hollywood couldn't exactly see its pet redhead as a farmerette, 1,000 miles from the cameras. But Ginger wasn't planning a farming career for herself, not just then. She meant business. The 4-R (Rogers' Rogue River Ranch) is intended to be a paying outfit, as well as a between-pictures vacation spot for Ginger. Ginger's mother, Lela Rogers, spends most of her time there. She came down to play Ginger's mother in a movie, but she stayed only four days and hied back to the 1,100 acres where dairy products are going to market daily.

Hollywood has had some real ranchers for years—Harry Carey, up near Saugus, homesteaded his place nearly 30 years ago, and that easy riding Harry does on the screen comes from long practice in rounding up his own stock. Joel McCrea is somewhat newer at the game, but he too is a veteran. Some years he has had to support his ranch from picture earnings, some years he has broken even, but last year he cleared $5,000 from his sideline and looks to do better this year.

THIS year looks good for Victor McLaglen, too. Vic has a sprawling slice of landscape up near Fresno where the porkers will bring the bacon home to Vic. About $35,000 worth, he figures, including income from fruit. That's gross, and he hasn't figured net profit yet.

Alan Curtis and Ilona Massey are profit-minded farmers, by proxy, up in northern California. Fred MacMurray's farm is up there, too. It was once a prune ranch, but Fred has introduced a variety of crops. Preston Foster, the hearty seaman, has joined the ranch brigade and will talk hayrakes and harrows as enthusiastically as he used to talk boats.

CHARGE BRICKER BUILDING HUGE POLITICAL FUND

Two Candidates For Governor Attack Surplus In Ohio Treasury.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Two of Ohio's five Democratic gubernatorial aspirants unleashed campaign attacks today, but neither aimed at primary opponents.

Both former congressman John McSweeney of Wooster and Walter F. Heer of Columbus charged Republican Gov. John W. Bricker was building up a huge state treasury surplus to further political ambitions.

Heer, Franklin county Democratic chairman, said in opening his campaign at Cleveland last night, "I propose to bring to this state a government operated for the sole benefit of Ohioans and not for records to which I might point with pride at a Republican national convention."

He declared the state finance director had reported the 1941 surplus as $26,000,000 "not $13,000,000 as Bricker continues to insist." Heer estimated the 1942 surplus would reach $36,000,000.

Taxpayers might well ask, Heer asserted, "Is Gov. Bricker so obtuse that he cannot understand the plain figures of his own director of finance, or is he deliberately trying to deceive you as to the real amount of the surplus, so that he may have this huge sum to promote his presidential aspirations in 1944?"

McSweeney asserted in a formal statement that Bricker was creating "a huge surplus of tax money which he hopes to build into a monument to further his political fortunes . . ."

He stated that taxpayers were being subjected to "double taxation" because after paying into the state treasury "more than is actually required," they were forced to "turn to special levies and bond issues to carry on their school programs" and other operations.

"The governor likes to say there has been no new taxes during his administration," he commented. "Since when have they built a fence around the governor's office and set it apart from the rest of the state and its subdivisions?"

GET NOTICES

Blood Donors to Be Called Upon For Second 'Tap.'

More than 300 Richland county contributors to the Red Cross blood donor program last May will receive notices next week that they are eligible to become donors a second time when the Cleveland blood donor unit pays another visit to Mansfield Sept. 3-4

All persons receiving notices were recommended to serve as donors for a second time by the Cleveland unit. Other notices were issued a short time ago to persons who volunteered in May but were not called upon for donations.

John Finefrock, chairman, and the blood donor committee are now at work on plans for the mobile unit's visit. It is likely that the Donation Center will be established in Bethany House of the First Presbyterian church where it was located for the first visit.

Pittsburgh Press Reopening Hit by New Pay Demand

PITTSBURGH —(INS)— Despite the return-to-work vote of striking truck drivers, th Pittsburgh Press was unable to resume publication today.

The drivers voted 55 to 32 to end their three-day walkout, but the management ran into another obstacle when printing trades crafts refused to return unless guaranteed pay for the time lost during the shutdown.

The management previously had announced that payrolls for all of the Press' 1,100 employes was suspended for the duration of the drivers' strike.

After a conference with representatives of the printing crafts, Editor E. T. Leech said it "looks like the plant will be closed down Saturday." He added that no further parleys have been arranged for the immediate future.

The truck drivers approved their return to work movement at a special meeting in union headquarters. They walked out Wednesday for the third time in six weeks in protest against management announcement that 14 drivers would be removed from the payroll to comply with government regulations requiring a 24 per cent reduction of truck deliveries.

LET PRISONERS FIGHT, REQUEST

'Yonnie' Licavoli Urges Men With Good Records Be Freed to Battle Axis.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Thomas "Yonnie" Licavoli, former Toledo gang leader who is serving a term in Ohio penitentiary for murder, today urged in a letter to a Columbus newspaper editor that prisoners with good records be permitted to take part in the war effort.

The letter read:

"Our country—yours and mine—it at war with the enemies of peace. My fellow inmates do not feel that they should be forgotten and denied the opportunity to fight and to work for the things dear to all of us, for our homes and families and the flag we all salute.

"I speak not for myself but rather for others here in Ohio penitentiary when I urge the public to recognize the eagerness of confined men to join forces in the complete destruction of the Axis and all that it represents. These men are ready—mentally, physically and morally. They only ask that evidences of these qualities be considered at this time."

Licavoli has served eight years and is not eligible for parole.

Warden Frank D. Henderson of the penitentiary has formed a prisoner "defense legion" that has been undergoing military training within the prison.

EIGHT KILLED BY LIGHTNING AS STORM HITS PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Eight men were killed by lightning, a six-year-old boy drowned and transportation systems were disrupted temporarily yesterday when a shattering electrical storm struck the Metropolitan Philadelphia area.

A single bolt killed four gardeners on the estate of Alfred I. DuPont at Rockland, Del., as they huddled under a marble arch. They were identified as Edward O'Connell, 60, Louis Durso, 68, Frank Lepore, 47, and John Dougherty, 49. A fifth man was injured.

Three men, James Gilmore, jr., 20, William Dilullo, 44, and Robert Kyle, 20, all employes of the Sharp and Dohme Chemical laboratories at Glenolden, were killed when lightning struck a transformer.

William M. Kempton, 22, lifeguard at the Tully-Secane Country club, was the eighth lightning victim.

Thomas Neville, son of Lieut. Col. F. N. Neville of the quartermaster corps, went wading in a gully and flood waters swept him into a storm sewer. His body was not recovered immediately.

All service on the Broad street subway was halted for a time and the force of the storm kept trolley and motor transportation at a standstill.

Munitions are man-made but never made of man, in the opinion of Mansfield police. When Lieut. Carl J. Kalstein and Patrolman Donald Mitchell were called to the junk yard of C. D. Appleman and company, 196 North Diamond street, late yesterday, they found a transient who seemingly had consigned himself to eternity by laying his body down on a pile of scrap metal destined for the huge mill maws which grind out the grist of war. In municipal court today Judge G. E. Kalbfleish imposed a fine of $5 and costs for intoxication.

100,000 ARE REPORTED SET TO AID ENEMY

Arrest of Draft-Evader Leads To Discovery of Plot For 'Race War.'

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK — FBI agents throughout the country today pressed an investigation of a Japanese-inspired fifth column which numbers more than 100,000 and is said to be ready to take up arms in event of a Jap invasion of the United States.

The fantastic army, according to FBI agents in New York, is spread from Canada to Mexico and from the Atlantic to the Pacific and has been in the process of organization for the past ten years under auspices of the powerful Japanese Black Dragon society.

Existence of the almost unbelievable conspiracy was disclosed yesterday by P. E. Foxworth, assistant FBI director for New York, following the arrest of one of the organizers. He is Nimo De Guzman, a Filipino dishonorably discharged from both the U. S. navy and the coast guard and who also has a civil criminal record.

De Guzman was first taken into custody for draft invasion—failing to notify his board of change of address and failure to return his questionnaire—but subsequent questioning revealed him as one of the principal organizers of the under-cover army, Foxworth said.

Details of the fifth-column's organization are lacking but it was disclosed that the organizers recruited members from among the dark-skinned residents of this country whom they sought to pit against the whites.

Whether or not any of the "followers" of the Black Dragon society are armed is not known but it has been determined that part of the pledge of the organizers was that arms would be supplied in advance of any invasion move.

Foxworth said De Guzman's activities began in 1932 when he addressed a negro meeting in Chicago under sponsorship of the late Marcus Garvey, self-styled Negro Moses. Present at the meeting was a Japanese who called himself Major Satohasai Takahashi and who afterward approached De Guzman.

"He asked De Guzman to become one of his organizers in America," Foxworth said.

The organization of "dark people" is known as the "Pacific Movement of the Eastern World" and is believed to have branches in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, New York, Cleveland, Washington, St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago and other cities where De Guzman was known to have operated in the past decade.

Pending further investigation, De Guzman will be taken to Washington where the draft evasion charges against him will be prosecuted.

Columbus Squad Rounds Up 50 In Swift Vice Raid

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The capital city's largest vice squad in history—17 men—today was proving to army officers that the "lid" has been clamped down, and tightly, and that the "heat is on" prostitutes and other morals violators.

To date, a total of 39 women and 11 men are in city prison for investigation and "to be held for the clinic." Capt. Robert Wynn, vice squad chief, said it was the biggest roundup of suspected prostitutes and their associates Columbus has ever seen.

"We will wait until after the roundup is completed before we place charges against them," Capt. Wynn said.

During the height of the roundup, suspects were brought in so fast that vice headquarters was rushed making out record cards, officers observed.

The roundup is the city's answer to charges by the army that Columbus prostitutes are spreading venereal diseases among soldiers at an alarming rate.

REDS BATTER NAZIS ON DON RIVER FRONT

Fail to Stop Break-Through By Enemy Toward Oil Centers In South.

German tank thrust toward Moscow. They executed one of their own number because he wanted to surrender.

The second concerned an order of the day people's leader Nicholas Schoor wrote in 1918 when the Germans invaded the Ukraine. The order said, "the soldier who abandons the battlefield without his superior's orders will be shot as a traitor."

Then Red Star reprinted the phrase of Nickolai Lenin, father of the Russian revolution: "Sentimentality, like fear, is a crime in war."

"Each officer and each political instructor is responsible for the impregnability of their position," Red Star said editorially.

Three days ago, Joseph Stalin, premier and defense commissar, exhorted the army to stand and fight to the death, not to take one step back.

The communique described fighting on the two hottest battlefronts:

"South and southeast of Bataisk, there is heavy fighting. The Germans succeeded in breaking through Russian defense lines and penetrating Soviet positions, where fighting is continuing.

"The enemy brought up large forces, with which he continued his attacks, and fighting in this area frequently goes over to bloody, hand-to-hand battle. However, the enemy succeeded in breaking through our defense lines and penetrating the positions of our troops, where fighting is now going on.

"In the Kletskaya region, our troops waged violent battles with enemy tanks and infantry."

"On another sector our troops made a light retreat to new positions."

The communique said there was fighting during the night around Tsimlyanskaya, half-way between Rostov and Stalingrad, but did not give particulars.

The Soviet army organ Red Star, in reporting the destruction of enemy panzer divisions on the southern front, did not specify the total destroyed, or the area. But it specifically mentioned the German 22nd tank division.

Russian artillery was reported to have trapped a German bridgehead in a burning forest on the south bank of the Don, around Tsimlyanskaya.

The Russians boxed the forest with their fire, shelling it steadily, and setting it on fire. The Germans unable to stand the flames, were compelled to try to break out. Fifteen tanks advanced in two sections, but anti-tank men shattered seven and blocked the sorties.

The Germans are trying to advance across the river Don around Tsimlyanskaya, on the south bend of the river, and around Kletskaya, on the north bend, 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad, and catch Stalingrad in a huge vise.

So far, they have managed to get across the Don only at Tsimlyanskaya, and the Russians are wiping out those units.

Not only have the Russians checked the Germans on the Kletskaya front, they have counter-attacked heavily, forcing them back about a mile-and-a-half, Red Star reported.

Russian publications emphasized the gravity of the situation around Bataisk, which is 15 miles south of Rostov.

Three days ago, Premier Joseph Stalin exhorted the army to stand and fight to the death.

The Germans pressed ahead around Bataisk by sheer weight of men and machines.

The Communist party organ Pravda said the battle was assuming even greater proportions and that the Don steppes were littered with German corpses, wrecked planes and guns. Air fighting has reached a new ferocity, with Soviet planes everywhere intercepting German dive bombers.

Red Star said that German positions on the west bank of the Don at Voronezh, 300 miles above Rostov, were becoming unfavorable, because of the successful Russian counter-offensive.

The noon communique also reported that local fighting continued on the Bryansk front, southwest of Moscow.

Nazis Start Counter Invasion Practice

LONDON —(U.P.)— Germany has started anti-invasion maneuvers along the French occupied coast, the German-controlled Paris radio said today.

The first maneuvers were held Thursday night and Friday morning at an unspecified base on the French coast, the radio said, and air force and naval units as well as the German army took part.

There seemed an increasing possibility here that when the second front is opened an American general will lead the Allied forces as commander in chief and Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff is talked about as a candidate.

It was quite evident that the Germans had now made up their minds that the second front was coming.

Each day they intensified their propaganda campaign to emphasize the strength of their defenses, and were warning the restive people of the European occupied coast to remain passive.

British sources reported that the Germans had posted warnings along the French, Belgian, Netherlands and Norwegian coasts that they would shoot any civilians who appeared in the streets when the invasion started.

Swiss dispatches from Berlin intimated that the Germans feared a guerrilla uprising timed with an Allied attack.

ships including six destroyers, a transport and a cruiser, have been sunk; a destroyer probably sunk, and nine other vessels, including four cruisers and an aircraft carrier damaged.

U. S. army-navy operations have been placed under unified command of a naval officer, a move possibly indicating more intensive efforts to drive the enemy out.

The Pribolof islands are strategically important only in their comparative proximity to the naval station at Dutch Harbor and to Alaska They are in the Bering sea and consist of four islands. Two of them, St. Paul and St. George islands, are important because they contain the largest and most numerous seal rookeries of the world

The islands have no harbors worthy of that designation and anchorages are available only when the wind is off shore.

Ban on Records Effective Today, Court Fight Seen

NEW YORK — (AP) — James Caesar Petrillo's ban on making of musical recordings and transcriptions for public use went into effect today but, thanks to expanded stocks, the public won't feel it until today's songs start grating on the ears.

Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL), advised Elmer Davis, director of war information, last night that the order would be carried out.

Davis had appealed to Petrillo to cancel the ban as a "patriotic duty," pointing out the tonic effect of music on public morale.

But Petrillo wrote Davis:

"I cannot grant your request. * * * You have been absolutely misinformed throughout."

There were indications that official action to fight the order was near. Attorney General Biddle authorized a suit to seek an injunction against enforcement of the order some time ago, and the New York Times said the suit would be filed in Chicago either today or Monday.

Petrillo declared the stoppage was ordered in an effort to put more union musicians to work: that thousands among his 138,000 members were idle because of the use of transcriptions and recordings by radio stations throughout the United States and Canada.

Defense Classes Get Taste of Tear Gas at Bellville

looked on from outside the gas range.

The crowd was disapointed for a time when nothing seemed to happen after the bombs were fired. Then the breeze wafted the gas cloud over the 60 defense pupils and tears streamed from their eyes as they sought cover behind the school building and elsewhere out of the range of the gas.

Freeman said the gas had a sweet odor, resembling apple blossoms, and it "sneaked up" on the group. Assisting with the demonstration were D. D. Rummel and Rev. A. H. McLain of Bellville, defense class instructors, and C H. Fuchs, recently appointed county senior gas officer.

The Bellville class holds weekly civilian defense demonstrations on Friday nights and plans to use incendiary bombs next week to destroy a small building.

HITS M'GREGOR ON WAR ISSUES

Dockery Claims Primary Foe 'Playing Politics' During 'Dangerous Times.'

on war measures," Dockery told his audience, "from having served in the U. S. Army in the Spanish-American war in Cuba, in the Philippine Insurrection, with American forces in the China Boxer Rebellion and in World war I—serving in all 42 years

"Three times since Pearl Harbor I have attempted to re-enter active service in the current world conflict. I know what soldiers want and need. I am familiar with naval issues. Congress needs men who know the facts of war, not merely members who can 'talk a good war' but sit safely on the sidelines"

Dockery declared he has been pledged the support of certain veterans' organizations as well as labor groups.

In the primary congressional alignment McGregor has the endorsement of Republican executive committees throughout the district composed of Richland, Ashland, Knox, Delaware, Coshocton and Licking counties.

Indicating in a message from Washington today that he will not make a personal campaign tour of the district, McGregor said:

"I am running for re-election on my record which I feel justifies the statement that I have fought for a fair chance for a free people.

"Everyone knows that by my votes in congress I have tried to keep our country out of war, and I make no apology for trying. However, I have always insisted on an adequate defense program.

"Since our declaration of war my record will show that I have by my voice and vote done everything in my power to provide ways and means of winning the war at an early date."

McGregor declared that since it is likely congress will remain in continuous session "I feel that my duty is to remain in Washington."

Civil Service Commission Seeks To Penalize Ohio BUC

COLUMBUS—(INS)—The U. Patterson, former Cincinnati BUC manager, who left his job for alleged Hatch act violations.

The state is required to show cause why it should not be penalized for allegedly violating a section of the Hatch "clean politics" act which stipulates that no person discharged under the act be employed by the state for 18 months.

themselves denied access to civil courts.

Exact scope of the decision will not be known definitely until the "full opinion" is written and made public, possibly in late September or when the court reconvenes in October.

Constitutionality of the military commission had not been decided when it began hearing final arguments after a three-day recess taken to permit proceedings before the high court.

Unquestioned, as a result of the supreme court's momentous decision, was the type of trial in store for any other enemy agents who slip behind this nation's line of defense.

Mr. Roosevelt, in ordering military trial for the saboteurs, directed that any other agents who might enter this country for purposes of sabotage or espionage be tried by military commission.

It also bolstered the wartime powers of the president, many of which would have been in doubt had the court ruled favorably on the saboteurs' petitions. The petitioners had, in effect, questioned the constitutionality of the presidential war powers.

As far as the spies personally were concerned, the difference between the two decisions the court could have rendered was the difference between death and a maximum of 30 years in prison.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—guard against damage to tires and waste of gasoline.

Unheard remark: "Let's go home now—it's midnight and that's the time the law says night clubs should close."

Sugar rationing registration, coming along soon, will make it necessary for some people to learn the location of their precinct voting place.

Supreme Court Upholds Procedure

THE PURPOSE of appealing the case of the Nazi saboteurs to the United States supreme court has been accomplished and the trial will now move forward to completion before the military commission appointed by President Roosevelt.

Carrying this matter to the supreme court, for opinion as to legality of proceedings, has impressed many observers as going beyond reasonable bounds in safeguarding the "rights" of confessed saboteurs from an enemy country, armed with explosives and other paraphernalia intended for use in impeding America's war efforts.

After the whole thing has been ended, it will be more clearly seen that the procedure, as it has moved slowly along, has furnished a fine example of the vast difference between such processes in a democracy and under totalitarian methods of inflicting the death penalty without trial and murdering unoffending hostages by the thousand.

In the United States, where human life is held to have great value and where individual rights are recognized and respected, there can be no such hurried action in proceedings in which lives are at stake, even when guilt is certain.

The supreme court rules that the charged offenses are such as to give the president authority to order trial before a military commission; that the commission is lawfully constituted and that the prisoners are in lawful custody.

Now that this point has been settled, termination of the trial and verdict of the judges will be patiently awaited.

Sticker Instead of License Plates

UNLESS something happens to change the decision, Ohio motorists will not receive the customary metal license plates next year. Instead, when they pay their state license fee the next time they will be given a sticker, two by four inches in size, to be displayed on the windshield.

According to announcement by Hal G. Sours, state highway director, this policy has been adopted by sixteen other states, as a metal conservation measure.

As long as such a change is being made, and with the idea of keeping the windshield from becoming a billboard, why wouldn't it be a simple matter to combine the federal government's "use tax" collection with the state license fee and let the one stamp serve as proof that both have been paid?

A weak spot in operation of the "use tax" law has been the ease with which payment has been avoided by many motorists and the difficulty of enforcement.

If one conspicuous sticker can be made to show payment of both the state license fee and the federal "use tax" it would appear to be a considerable improvement over the present method.

Painted Too Cheerful a Picture

THREE British newspaper correspondents have been called home from Egypt, to be taken to task for their reports. They erred, it seems, on the side of over-optimism, telling their Egyptian readers what vast reinforcements of men and munitions had reached the British commander in Libya, General Auchinleck. The effect was to give the feeling that everything was going splendidly, and that Egypt need make no particular war effort. Although Marshal Rommel has been halted for a time, no observant person would say that the war in Egypt was "going splendidly." Also, every effort that can be made to resist the Axis in North Africa will be none too much.

These British correspondents yielded to a very natural temptation: to play up items that would please their readers. It is human to like favorable news, with its suggestion that present discomforts will not last long. Newspaper headlines sometimes show this tendency to give undue prominence to the bright side of the news. To do so is not always the best service. The British correspondents who were recalled from Egypt may have pleased their readers, but they did not help their country.

Ford Optimistic at Seventy-Nine

HENRY FORD, at seventy-nine, expresses an optimistic outlook on life which might well be emulated by other Americans.

Always rather idealistic in his conception of individual responsibility, as evidenced by his "peace ship" fiasco in the early stages of the first World war, Mr. Ford now foresees only a few more months of war, then such an era of progress as the world has never before seen.

Use of farm products in industry "in thousands of ways"; steady advances in the field of plastics; air transportation of freight with world distribution freed from trade barriers—these are among Mr. Ford's vision of the future, and he is still working day after day to make his own contribution to their accomplishment.

No Shirking In the WAAC

NINE-TENTHS of the white officer candidates of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps now at Fort Des Moines are college graduates. Two-thirds have taught school or held clerical positions and one-tenth are forty or older.

More than three-fourths of the Negro candidates are college graduates, one of whom holds an advanced degree.

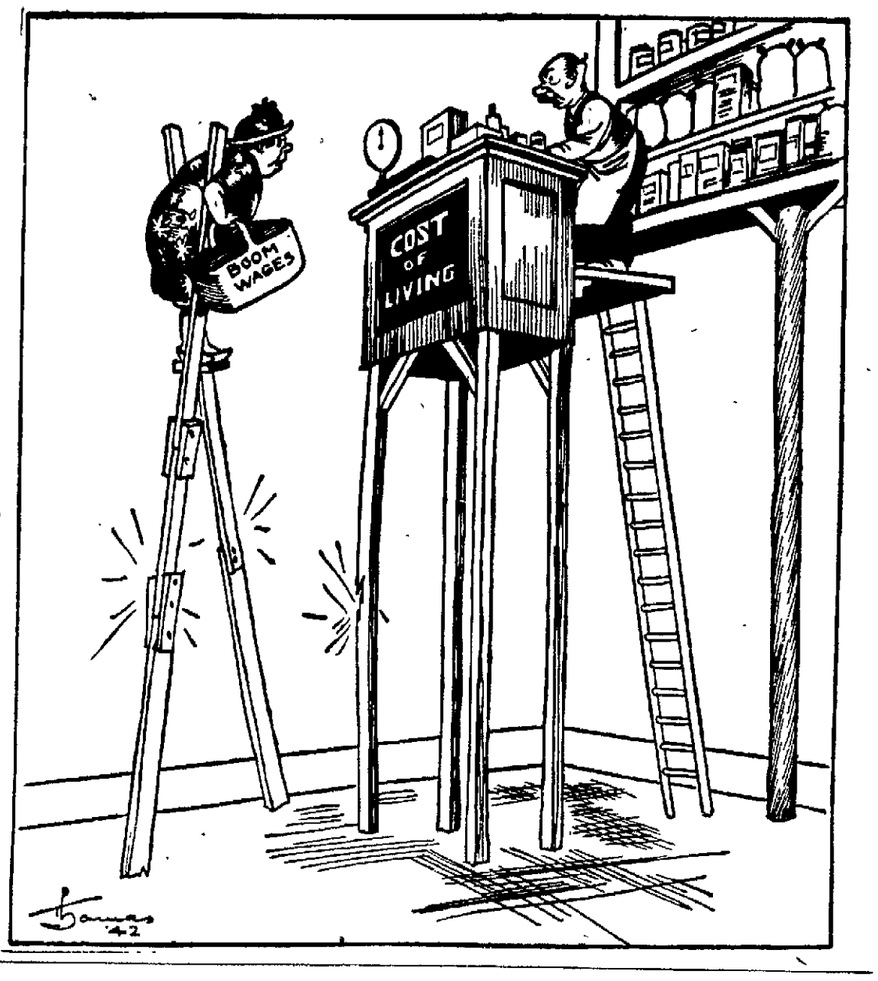
They all want real work. They look for nothing easy. Nine-tenths of them want to go overseas.

There's nothing silly, lazy or sensation-seeking about these women. They are there to give their best to win the war, and will undoubtedly be a valuable asset to the army.

A California police test for drunkenness requires the suspect to blow up a toy balloon—and some parties reach a stage at which this seems to work no hardship.

A petrified head is being sent from Arizona to the national museum in Washington—marking a departure from the customary way of waiting until after election.

HERE'S HOW INFLATION WORKS



F.D.R. Active In New York Politics

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Mr. Average Congressman, who is derided by all and sundry because of his persistence in keeping his ear to the ground, in casting cowardly votes because he is afraid of his constituents at the next election, and in making hypocritical speeches for the same reason, casts an admiring eye at the "amateur" politician in the White House when it comes to keeping one's political fences back home in good repair. F. D. R. is overlooking no political bets whatever, war or no war.

That is the answer to the crazy quilt which is New York state politics. That is why F. D. R. has given his blessing to James M. Mead, thus starting Mead hopefully on what is the best advertised road to the White House known to politicians—the New York governorship.

F. D. R. is very fussy about who gets started on that road. Remember Chicago? Chicago of 1940, when F. D. R. was drafted for a third term, not Chicago of 1932, with its safe and sane conservative, budget-balancing platform, and a candidate for vice president selected because he could bring delegates to F. D. R. The 1940 convention was a different story. Then F. D. R. jammed down the throats of unwilling delegates —Henry A. Wallace, for vice president, the vice presidency being another of the best-known roads to the White House.

ON THAT occasion the victims, particularly Paul V. McNutt, who seems entitled to the title of chief victim, took their medicine like nice little boys. As is well known, the White House has been trying to hang a political black eye on Paul ever since, giving him jobs guaranteed by the leading yes men of the administration to ruin him politically.

But the question now is whether the latest crop of victims, assuming that F. D. R. has his way and Jim Mead is the Democratic nominee for governor, will be as docile. It is too soon to say. Politicians, before the final decision, always erupt fire and brimstone. Mayhap, when the convention balloting is over and Mead is the nominee, Jim Farley and Attorney General Bennett will be good boys. But maybe they will sulk in their tents.

If one could tell this now there would be no advantage in political maneuvering. It wouldn't fool anybody. It would be like playing poker with matches instead of chips that can be cashed in at the end of the game.

This, of course, is assuming that F. D. R. will win this war in the New York convention. That is a natural assumption at the moment despite the fact that a clean majority of the delegates were pledged to Bennett in advance. You may remember that Thomas E. Dewey won nearly all the primaries in 1940, while Senator Robert Taft had the most pledges for the Republican national convention, neither of which meant very much after a few ballots. And this man Roosevelt has not lost many fights since 1932, if one expects the purges

AT PRESENT, however, the New York gubernatorial battle looks like a real fight. So real that if there is any considerable amount of sulking in the tents—if there are many cases of stalwart party men going fishing on election day—there may be an upset.

Meanwhile, F. D. R. is leaving no stone unturned to insure that the New York delegation to the next Democratic national convention will be in there pitching for whatever F. D. R. wants.

Hasty Marriages

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THESE RUSH WAR MARRIAGES—. Meeting one night at a U. S. O. dance, then scampering to the altar next week.

Dr. Bowman of Stephens college, Columbia, Mo., doesn't believe in them and says so and why in a current monthly magazine. He says they're both bad for military morale and America's future.

Henry H. Bowman, Ph.D., is no amateur in affairs of the heart. He's head of the Course In Marriage and the Family, at Stephens college. For which, a salute to said institution, since such courses are about as rare as hen's teeth in our educational program, yet probably needed more than all the academic subjects put together.

So you may be saying, "A Ph. D. making rules about marriage—pooh! What does such an old fossil know about romance? What do campus theories have to do with emotion?"

Right there you let yourself in for a big surprise. Dr. Bowman knows plenty about emotion. He has seen the hell it can raise and he knows it's the worst possible foundation for a happy marriage.

That's why he's against these war weldings. The majority of them, says he, are nothing but a prolonged petting party. The contracting couples have no real knowledge of each other. They meet in the mingled glamor of moonlight, snazzy uniforms and war excitement.

It's all such fun that they think it will last forever. So they hotfoot it for the nearest justice of the peace. But again you may be saying, "Why prevent them? They're young and impulsive. The war has robbed them of the joy which is natural and right for youth. That boy may die within a month . . . why not give them both their little taste of ecstasy before the dark shuts down?"

Yes, that's a very touching argument and Dr. Bowman gives full credit to it. But he still insists that these flash-in-the-pan marriages are no cure for war risks, no basis for future bliss. The marriage that is founded on excitement and emotion only is almost inevitably bound to end in a terrible hangover and the divorce court.

"Well, what of it?" said one pert young thing to the professor. "I think you're working yourself into a lather over nothing. Suppose a lot of people do get married foolishly. When the war is over they can get divorced. That's nobody's business but their own. Our generation doesn't have the horror of divorce that our parents had."

And that's the attitude of millions of young people today toward all marriage, including wartime unions. But it's a bum steer, youngsters. Divorce isn't just your business and it doesn't leave either you or society unscathed. I know what I'm talking about because I've been divorced and I've discovered just what it costs, which is plenty.

No matter how delinquent your partner may seem to be, no matter how rankly you're wronged . . . a divorce leaves a scar on you which life can never erase. You may marry again with a far more congenial person . . . but you'll never put aside the ghost of those first dreams and you'll never know the bliss of a lifelong relationship which has grown ever deeper with shared joys and sorrows.

No matter how you figure it out, divorce makes you the loser. It cheapens life; it blights the soul. And the person that enters into a hasty marriage expecting divorce as a solution is two-timing himself and all society.

For marriage, however you view it, is the basis of society; it's the foundation for the democracy for which we are fighting today and these impulsive war romances undermine that foundation, shake the soldier's trigger finger, loose a horde of restless, irresponsible war brides on every community.

Bad stuff, youngsters.

Redpath Chautauqua opened in tent on West Second street, with afternoon and evening programs.

It was announced that Dr. C. D. Morgan of Galion planned to open office in Mansfield soon, and new home was being built at corner of Park avenue west and Glenwood boulevard.

City council granted Jared Mansfield chapter, D. A. R., privilege of erecting statue in Central park.

Miss Clara Schuttera and Shirley H. Ackley were married by Rev. Craig W. Schwartz.

Friends surprised Clyde V. Neff, 32 North Adams street, on his birthday anniversary.

Daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Swendal, Ohio street.

Mrs. W. W. Eccles, West Sixth street, underwent operation for removal of needle believed swallowed years before.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Francis Scott Key, celebrated author of "The Star Spangled Banner," was born this date in 1779 in Frederick county, Maryland. Key wrote the anthem as he witnessed the British bombardment of Fort McHenry near Baltimore. He was a visitor aboard a British vessel at the time. By an act of congress approved by the president on March 3, 1931, the air was officially designated as our national anthem.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Senate Weighs Taxation Measure, Ponders Ways to Boost Revenues

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WHAT congress should do, said Wisconsin's Senator Wiley, is raise 36 billion dollars by taxation and insist that Americans buy 36 billion dollars worth of war bonds.

Said Senator Wiley: "We should not consider for one moment passing on to the following generation more than 50 per cent of the cost of this war. If we do we are pikers."

He suggested that senators voting for his plan should pledge a third of their net income to purchase of bonds.

There were no indications that the senate was going to go that far toward meeting the estimated war expenditures of 72 billion dollars for the next 12 months.

But there were strong signs that it was going to go much farther than the house-approved $6,271,000,000 revenue bill, which would bring total federal revenues to an estimated 22 billion dollars.

Asked For Increase.

The treasury had asked for $8,700,000,000 in increased taxes, and when the house measure fell short of that figure had urged the senate finance committee to boost individual and corporation income rates.

During the week the committee heard a series of proposals for increasing government revenue.

M. L. Seidman, representative of the New York Board of Trade, proposed throwing out all personal income tax exemptions, putting a flat 10% tax on every dollar exempt under the house bill but changing the normal tax rate to 4% instead of 6%. He estimated that plan would bring in an extra 5 billion dollars.

Another New Yorker, merchant Julian Goldman, suggested that the government could bring in 25 to 30 billion dollars by siphoning off "excess purchasing power," making heavy bond buying compulsory for persons whose incomes rocketed because of the war. Biggest drawback to such a plan, most senators said, would be in setting up machinery to make it work.

Savings By Taxation.

Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the senate committee backed a system of compulsory savings through taxation, with a certain percentage of the tax to be invested in bonds, repayable to the taxpayer after the war.

Some form of forced saving seemed to be the most generally acceptable plan.

Receiving little attention in committee consideration was the presidential suggestion that all individual incomes be limited to $25,000 a year. Such a plan, the treasury estimated, would bring only $660,000,000 additional revenue annually, little over 1% of the 53 billion dollar deficit.

NEW YORK—This Greek had a word for it too. His name was Spyros Skouras. . . . When George, the King of the Greeks, came to New York, Spyros Skouras gave a dinner for him at the Astor hotel. . . . Mr. Skouras is president of Twentieth-Century Fox. . . . Why did Skouras choose the Astor? . . . "I'm sentimental," he confessed, "I used to be a busboy there."

IT IS Gypsy Rose Lee who tells this tale on Joan Crawford. The strip dancer had it straight from her sister, June Havoc, in a letter the other day. . . . While Joan was filming "They All Kissed the Bride," they wanted her to appear in a scene that showed her changing her clothes in an office building after being out all night. . . . Joan reneged. . . . She felt the scene would offend her family trade fans. . . . Alexander Hall, the director, scratched his head. . . . Then he sent next door to the "My Sister Eileen" set and asked June Havoc to come over for a moment. . . . Hall explained Joan's reluctance . . . "Honey," said June, "the trick is to peel and show as little as possible. It's a cinch. Gypsy taught it to me and I've been getting away with it for years."

YOU have to hand it to John Pierce for doing a great job with those operetta revivals at Carnegie Hall. When he put on "The Chocolate Soldier" they hoped it would go two weeks, and the ticket takers compelled the "Soldier" to hang on an additional week. Then, in a week's time, he produced "The Merry Widow," and the critical opinion is that again Pierce has done one slick piece of producing and directing.

Pierce is no novice at musical shows and the dance. He will never be president of the USA because he was born in Mexico City. But he knows show business, and he knows how to impart this knowledge to others. It was Pierce who "coined" the Johnny-one-note number for "Babes in Arms," a novelty that has been used extensively ever since by directors everywhere. He put 25 dancers in a straight line across a stage and had them all do different steps. . . . Pierce got going early in life. At 18 he staged and directed "Billie" for George M. Cohan. He has danced, directed, and taught dancing in Hollywood and in New York.

His greatest disappointment? . . . That came in the tough days, when he was trying hard to keep from being hungry. . . . He was trying so hard that he forgot to look in his mailbox one morning—and overlooked a letter from Bill Grady offering him a job with Cochran in London. . . . When Pierce finally retrieved the letter from the mailbox and rushed over to Grady's office, Cochran had sailed—and there went a chance to work with one of the world's great producers.

However, Pierce didn't starve. Shortly after that he ran into one of those Hollywood "breaks" and went to the films. He's been doing okay ever since.

Quotes

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wye): "Of course Congress is not perfect . . . We are full of mistakes. We have our limitations. But I know of no member of the senate or house who would not gladly sacrifice himself to win this war. I do not know of anybody who is putting his political future ahead of his country."

Majority Leader Barkley: "Many (senators) wish to adjourn but they do not wish to vote to adjourn. Many of them simply adjourn without voting to adjourn . . . but if they should be brought back to vote on whether or not to adjourn, although they had already adjourned, they would vote not to adjourn."

At Home

Beefs About Beef.

The cut of roast beef that normally occupies No. 1 position on many a Sunday dining room table in the East was missing from a great number of them last weekend. And there wasn't much pork to be had in the markets, and veal was scarce.

President Roosevelt, in a press conference, gave no assurance that such shortages were only temporary, warned rather that the current meat situation was just the first of progressive shortages in essential supplies.

Hinting that before long many people were going to be forced, by just such shortages, into a greater realization of the seriousness of war, the president gave three reasons for the meat shortage: (1) it is the off season for beef; (2) people with more money than usual to spend have been buying more and better meat; (3) 4 million men in the armed forces are eating more meat than they normally did at home, and their meat must be bought 8 or 10 months in advance.

Some meat tradesmen, though, blamed the shortage on the lack of a ceiling on livestock prices and the lack of some means of keeping manufacturers from diverting production to more profitable areas.

Smelly Business.

The inside of a submarine is not the nicest smelling place in the world under the best conditions. The air in one Nazi submarine must be especially bad.

The crewmen of that U-boat, apparently short-rationed, recently took aboard what they wanted of a 40,000 pound onion cargo before sinking the ship which carried it.

More interesting, but not so amusing, to American readers was the fact that the ill-fated onion boat sunk near Havana was the 400th sent to the bottom in Western Atlantic waters since Pearl Harbor.

That gave the Axis underwater raiders an almost two-a-day average in the 233 days since Pearl Harbor. With the 400 ships went the lives of more than 2,000 seamen and passengers—and 1,620 more are still missing and considered lost.

Wrong Guess In Texas.

"There ain't gonna be no runoff," Texas Senator W. Lee O'Daniel had told his listeners during his campaign to be nominated for a second senatorial term.

But the colorful former governor of "pass the biscuits, Pappy" fame had been wrong. He will face James W. Allred in a runoff Aug. 22. Allred garnered some 32% of the Texas democratic primary vote to O'Daniel's 48%. A runoff is required in Texas unless one candidate gets a majority.

Abroad

Crisis In Russia.

The Nazi advance in Russia appears to shape up into three spearheads. From Rostov, the Germans pushed southward toward the Maikop oil fields some 350 miles away, where the Soviet gets about 10% of her oil. This prong moved over Black Sea foothill terrain, relatively easy for mechanized forces.

Some 120 miles northeast, at Tsimlyansk, another prong crossed the lower Don and moved to the Stalingrad-Tikhoretsk railway, last rail link between the Caucasus and Russia proper. Carried straight through, this second spearhead would end up at Astrakhan, Caspian Sea port at the mouth of the Volga, would completely seal off the Caucasus and shut off the supply route up the Volga.

But the threat to the Volga was much closer in the Stalingrad area, where the third prong had smashed its way across the treeless Don steppes to within 50 miles of the industrial metropolis.

Desert Retake.

It looked like a retake in miniature of the winter and spring campaign. Both sides rested on their anti-tank guns in the Egyptian desert while the generals wirelessed frantically for reinforcements.

From Cairo, Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck reported devastating aerial blows at Axis supply trains, materials dumps. From Marshal Erwin Rommel came only indications he was digging in until help arrived.

The situation was still tense, though, and observers said one big convoy successfully arrived might swing the balance of power either way.

Unfair Exchange.

Americans who read last winter of Japanese diplomatic employes and newspapermen being interned in swank southern resorts, sizzled as they read first reports during the week of what had happened to U. S. citizens in Japanese hands since the outbreak of war.

AP men returning with some 1,100 citizens of the U. S. and other American nations filed their stories from Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, where exchange for a similar number of Japanese and Thai nationals was affected.

Max Hill, chief of AP's Tokyo bureau when war came, told of long weeks of solitary confinement, during freezing weather, in an unheated cell.

Those Japanese Again.

Names like Buna, Awala, Salamaua came back into the headlines when modest Japanese invasion forces, about 2,500 men, landed near Gona Mission in New Guinea, pushed down toward Port Moresby 110 miles away.

Allied patrols chased them back while General MacArthur's air force pasted enemy toeholds at Buna and Gona.

Elsewhere in the Far Pacific U. S. submarines nibbled at the Jap navy, sank one modern destroyer, a tanker, three cargo ships.

People

No Excess Profits.

Winner—and loser—of the week was chubby-faced Byron Nelson, Toledo golf professional, who took home $2,500 first prize money from the Tam O'Shanter open tournament at Chicago.

What he didn't take home, though, was a $1,000 bonus he would have received had he sunk an 8-foot putt on the last hole of an earlier round, a putt which would have given him an 8-under-par 64 to break the course record.

And what his wife didn't take home was a $1,000 diamond ring. It was stolen along with some other articles from Nelson's car during his playoff match with Clayton Heafner, a playoff necessitated by another missed putt on that bugaboo 18th.

curred in a corridor in the cellblock, Moore told authorities that Dickerson had "ratted" on him, meaning, in prison parlance, informing guards of the misconduct of another inmate.

Moore also contended that Dickerson reached in his pocket as if to draw a weapon when Moore stabbed him. It was found later, however, that Dickerson was unarmed.

Native of Corbin, Ky., Moore was admitted to the reformatory when he was 17, from Tiffin, O., for auto theft and carrying concealed weapon.

He told the court today that his father was dead and he had four sisters and a brother. Three of the children are in the Junior Order home at Tiffin.

Dickerson had been in the reformatory since 1934, serving a one to 20 year term for cutting with intent to wound.

reconnaissance planes shot down a challenging Japanese plane in the Rabaul zone of New Britain island, east of New Guinea.

They made a heavy attack on Gona village, center of the new enemy invasion base on the north New Guinea coast, and started two big fires near the coast in addition to doing other damage.

In the Solomon islands attack, the Allied planes did great damage to enemy installations in addition to hitting the transport and supply dump.

A United Press dispatch from an advanced Allied base said it was believed that in addition to at least seven fighters and two bombers shot down in a Japanese raid on Darwin yesterday morning several additional enemy fighters and bombers crashed on their way home because their fuel ran out.

(The British radio, heard by CBS, reported that the Japanese were believed to have lost a total of 20 planes, 13 fighters and seven bombers.)

Four more planes were believed to have been destroyed, bringing the total Jap losses to 21.

In a communique issued from headquarters of the United States army, Gen. Stilwell disclosed that nine of a force of 29 Jap Zero fighters which attempted to break through the Hengyang air defenses at night were shot down when American planes intercepted.

Three American planes were lost in the air duels but all the pilots were saved, Gen. Stilwell said.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

URGES CARE IN SELECTION OF WALL COLORS

FHA Recommends Choice of Hues You Will Not Tire of Soon.

The color and type of wall materials in the home is for the most part a matter of personal taste. However, there are many factors to consider in making the selection. A choice should be carefully considered, as once the work is done it cannot be changed without a lot of work and expense.

This fact is particularly true today. While repainting and redecorating come under the heading of maintenance and repair, and are permissible under the WPB ruling, they should not be done except as is absolutely necessary to keep a property in sound livable condition. All other work should be postponed during the war period.

So be sure that your selection of a wall covering—whether it is paint or paper—is the right one for your home; one that you will not tire of soon.

It is important to select a cheerful light tint with good reflection value for a room that is ordinarily quite dark. On the other hand, if the house has so many doors and windows that there is usually a brilliant glare, it is wise to decide upon a more restful tone.

There is no question but color can produce many amazing effects. Color can not only make a room lighter or darker but can actually make it appear larger or smaller, or even seem cooler or warmer.

The light tints of blue, green, and gray, for instance, known as "receding" colors, give a cool effect and seem to push the walls outward instead of bringing closer as is the case with the darker and warmer colors.

The right choice of color in either paint or wallpaper can go a long way toward making the home a more cheerful and livable place.

Loans to finance repainting and decorating necessary to keep a property in a sound, habitable condition, may be made on FHA's Title 1 Plan. For full information regarding FHA home repair and maintenance loans, go to your local FHA office, or to any qualified lending institution.

Max Diner Celebrates 14 Years Service for Mansfield Families

Proprietor Knew Gen. MacArthur "When."

One of Mansfield's favorite eating places for families is the Max Diner at 15 South Walnut street which has been pleasing Mansfield palates for the past 14 years.

A. D. McNew, proprietor of the Max Diner, celebrated his fourteenth anniversary in business last week. That is, he celebrated his Mansfield anniversary for he has been in the restaurant business for the last 38 years.

His diner provides the best of foods, prepared in an appetizing manner and with the most courteous of service. The name, Max Diner, is well-known throughout the state.

McNew was born in the Cumberland mountains in Virginia. When he was still but a youth, he left home to go in training with the U. S. army just before the outbreak of the Spanish-American war.

Restless for Action

After training in Camp Alger, Va., a while, McNew became restless for want of action and asked for a transfer to the Philippines.

McNew arrived in the Philippines on the same day that General Lawton was killed by rioting natives and he soon had plenty of the action he was looking for. He took part in many of the Philippine campaigns and was stationed under General Arthur MacArthur, father of the famous General Douglas MacArthur.

McNew remembers the now-famous General MacArthur as a "shavetail just out of West Point. MacArthur, then a second lieutenant, came to the Philippines to visit his father.

Upon his release from the army, McNew traveled about the Orient for several years before returning to this country. Back in San Francisco, he looked about for work.

Joins Minstrel

He finally hitched up with a traveling minstrel show, and was one of the black-faced comedians "and not a very good one," according to McNew.

McNew stayed with the minstrel until it arrived at his home town. There he decided, upon "advice" from his fiance, to quit the show and to turn to some other means of making a living.

He next worked for a railroad for a few years but abandoned it to go into the grocery business. McNew's grocery was located in the Cumberland mountains and most of his customers traveled far from their homes to trade with him. While there, they needed food and McNew soon saw the opportunity to start a restaurant.

He established his first restaurant in 1904 and has remained in the business since. When he first came to Mansfield 14 years ago, business was "tough."

But he soon learned that employes of the old Mansfield Journal, which was established then directly across from the diner, were starting to bring him trade. His restaurant prospered and he continually made improvements.

When he first started his restaurant, McNew lived in a trailer perched atop the diner. Later, he had the trailer removed and replaced it with an apartment which he occupies.

McNew, a soldier himself, has sent his sons into the services. One of them, Ed McNew, is stationed in the Panama Canal zone.

McNew has also lost several of his old employes who have been taken into the services. He still maintains his high standards of service and food preparation, however, and his cooks prepare all foods in constant awareness of the "food for freedom" nutrition program.

The Max Diner is open around the clock, operating on a 24-hour schedule. Regular breakfasts, luncheons and dinners are served and special orders are available at any time.

McNew's greatest pride is the pastry which the Diner presents. "We probably have one of the best pastry cooks in the country," says McNew.

Shown in the picture above are the employes of the Max Diner, 15 South Walnut street, who recently posed for their picture in connection with the celebration of the diner's 14th anniversary.

DETECTING JOB

GREAT FALLS, Mont.—(U.P.)—Pvt. William Jones of the Royal Canadian Air Force lost the address of his uncle, who lived in Montana.

The Canadian mounted police said they could not help him, but suggested he write Police Chief Mady of Great Falls.

In a few days Jones received a letter from Mady saying his uncle had been found living in Great Falls. What he didn't know was that his uncle operated a grocery store situated between Chief Mady's residence and the sheriff's headquarters.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

You Say You Won't — But Wait!

By DOROTHY ROE
(Wide World Fashion Editor)

Say goodbye to your beloved little calots, girls. Prepare to give up that easy habit of pinning a bow in your hair and calling it a hat. Those days are gone forever.

This fall hats are hats, and no mistake about it. Honest-to-goodness crowns and brims are with us again — and what crowns! What brims! What silhouettes and trims!

Sally Victor and Lilly Dache, two top-flight members of millinery's Big Three, interpret the new important look in various ways. Both show many towering crowns in their fall collections. Both go for hats that fit the head and cover up the hair. Both present versions of the cloche, done in a new and exciting way. Sally takes her inspiration from Yugoslav peasants and Russian Cossacks, Lilly from the American scene.

Both are shuffling the cards for a new deal in hats. And you'll be wearing 'em.

Maids of Victory Are Entertained

The sixth meeting of the Maids of Victory 4-H club was held at the home of their advisor, Mrs. Seif, Lexington. The regular order of business was followed. The girls answered the roll call by naming a health rule. Betty Pollock and Norma Schindler gave a first aid demonstration. A talk on "Removal of Stains" was given by Eileen Mentzer. Also a summary of the picnic held by the club last week at Liberty park, was given by Patty Frizzell.

Group singing was led by Virginia Queen. The meeting was closed by the girls pledging allegiance to the flag and the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." Refreshments were served by Patty Frizzell, Virginia Queen and Lois Pollock. The games were in charge of Betty Pollock and Donna Clevenger.

LINEN SHOWER GIVEN.

A linen shower was given recently in honor of Mrs. Edward McNamara, the former Betty White, at the home of Mrs. Donald Bair, 141 Glenwood boulevard. Associate hostesses were Mrs. Ernest Phillips and Mrs. Ira Metcalf. Games were played during the evening with prizes being won by the guests who in turn presented them to the guest of honor. The hostesses presented Mrs. McNamara with a lovely gift of linen. Refreshments were served later in the evening.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"YES, MOTHER, I said cordially, but with a distinct "sinking feeling" inside me. I sensed that my militant mother-in-law was on the warpath.

"I want to know, Margaret, if it is by your orders that my advice and my authority over the children are set aside."

My mental barometer sank still lower. I had only suspected another domestic crisis with Katie.

In answering I deliberately struck a tragedy note.

"Mother, darling!" I said insistantly. "Don't answer so that Lillian will suspect what I am saying, but there is news she must not hear. We are very much afraid for Marion; nothing definite, but we are all working like mad to see what can be done. I wish you would keep Lillian with the children as much of the time as possible, and humor her in anything she wishes to do. As soon as I know anything definite I will write you."

Mother Graham Appeased

I had struck the right note. "Of course, my dear girl," she said. "I understand, and I will do everything you wish. Also please forget what I said just now. Ah, Lillian, Margaret wants to talk to you."

Lillian's voice was almost a gasp.

"Madge! Has anything happened?"

"No, no," I told her emphatically, thankful that she had not overheard the theatrical falsehood with which I had just won my mother-in-law back to tractable behavior.

"Oh, thank God!" she said. Then she asked mechanically: "What can I do for you?"

I told her my errand quickly in "camouflaged conversation," and assured her that Katharine would have a telephone number by which to reach me, should she need to call me when I was out.

Then I said good-bye to Junior and Faith, to whom I always give the last word, and hung up the receiver to face Mary.

"Is that true," she said, "what you said to Grandma Graham? Do you know anything about Marion you haven't told me?"

"I give you my word," I said, "that there is nothing new concerning Marion. Your grandmother was on the warpath about Aunt Lillian, I think. It was necessary to do something drastic immediately."

She breathed a deep sigh of relief, then her lips quirked into an irrepressible grin.

Agrees to Go to Restaurant

"Don't write to her too soon, unless you have another mustard plaster ready," she advised. Then she threw her arms around me exuberantly.

"I take it you are going with us," she said. "Ain't so?"

"Yes, I'll go," I told her. "What time shall I be ready, and where shall I meet you?"

"About five-thirty, and we'll come here after you," she said.

"I can't leave here unless Katharine is back," I warned her, "but I'm sure she will be."

"We'll wait for you, if she isn't," she said.

Katharine was back before the trio came in, and I did not have to delay them. We went by taxi to the restaurant, and I knew every step of our journey was trailed by one or more of my father's men, who later would also be diners at the restaurant.

When we had taken the table reserved for us, Stephen Redfield excused himself saying he must see someone upstairs in another dining room. As soon as he was out of hearing Mary leaned forward.

"Steve hasn't noticed yet that the old man is lamping us. Indeed, he's so absorbed in himself that I don't believe he's noticed him at all. But if he doesn't get it tonight I'm going to put him next, just for the devil of it. You're facing the door, Lina. Do you see our old man anywhere?"

CHAPTER XVII

"Wanted by the police?" Morley chuckled. It was better than he had hoped. A pleased slow smile spread from his thin lips to his dark and gleaming eyes.

Gordon sat at the foot of the bed, one elbow on the enamelled metal end-board, gazing steadfastly at Morley studying his reaction.

"Go ahead. What's the rest of it? Are they tailing after you for something serious? asked Morley, shifting his lean body higher.

"Yes. I'm afraid they are. It was this way," began Gordon, quivering.

"Don't lie to me. Give me the real story, the truth," said Morley. Gordon forced himself to hesitate and keep his voice low. He wished Morley would try to pull the story out of him piece by piece. He knew Morley would relish it more that way. Gordon wanted to flatter Morley's vanity; to make him feel himself clever. Morley nibbled gently at the bait, then bit.

"I'll bet it was a petty larceny job. Kiddie bank holdup!"

"I'm beyond that kind of stuff," Gordon protested, "I tried that in school. A writer like I am sits in an apartment window, watching the crowd go by. He can drop a flower on somebody in the crowd if he wants to."

"Or the flower-pot," snapped Morley. "Go on."

"I wrote a yarn about a woman I knew pretty well. You've seen her face on page one of the 'News' and 'Tribune.' Her fingers usually drip with emeralds. She's always worth a headline."

"In chit-chat column of top drawer society names," smiled Morley. "Sure. I know the kind you mean."

"I wrote a slander story, about her West 10th street apartment that she rented with a fish-eyed lover. I ran a first draft, then showed her enough of the story to make the last of it a weapon to blackmail her with. I told her the price I was willing to take to keep my mouth shut, and shelve the dirty piece. But instead of coughing up the cash, she went to the district attorney's office for protection, and told the D. A. it was a shakedown."

"A smart dame!"

"The warrant for my arrest calls me a blackmailer!"

"The old queen had guts!" Morley grinned. "That's what you are!"

"I had to get out of New York in a hurry and that's the real reason why I came to Denver."

"Cora would like to hear that dime novel stuff," said Morley laughing, after a sip of his brandy and water. "She thinks you're pure as the mountain snow. But you drifted."

"I've been writing to a couple of people back home. It was a mistake. Some stool pigeon must have sung to the detective bureau as to where I am. I want to get out of Denver now, but I don't know how to do it. The police are probably checking on railroads and the airport. I've just got to hide somewhere until this cools off and then take a chance on some freighter."

"Can you play casino and rummy?"

"Sure, even bridge."

"Then you've got yourself a place to hide and a new job. It's right here in the hospital. Ring the bell for the nurse."

Gordon pressed the bedside button, surprised at how quickly Morley's mind worked. It was exactly what he was going to ask Morley to do for him. "That's a great idea, if you can work it."

"If I can work it?" he repeated. "It's a cinch. Watch me put it over for you. The police won't think of looking for you in a hospital; but remember, chum, that you don't forget to be mighty grateful for what I'm doing. Fellows like you often have a bad memory."

Gordon took the insult silently. The handle of the door clicked, and a heavy woman entered.

"Hello darling!" cooed Morley. "Any indications of your being liverish this morning?"

"Don't you darling me," she snapped. "It's patients like you who spoil my disposition." She sniffed the acrid air. "Who's been drinking whiskey in this room?"

Morley laughed, "I break your hospital rules? Never! It's the flowers you smell, sweetheart. Give me a kiss to pep me up."

"Miss Drussel, to you," she retorted with dignity, then grinned at Gordon; and said, "He's the worst patient in the hospital. He thinks that he's the only patient here, and that I've fallen in love with him. Me, at my age!"

"Never too old to love," said Morley. "This is my friend, Brad Lewis." They smiled at each other. She was now pleasant. She straightened Morley's pillows a bit tenderly.

"Brad needs a job," said Morley.

"Let him go see the mayor," she answered.

"No joking, just for a week or so, darling, until I can take him to Jack Pot City with me. I need to have him around to keep me company, to talk to me. Didn't you say you'd like a tidy check for the Nurses' home when I leave?"

'Well, all I could help him get would be something like being a general helper to Mr. Travers in the basement, doing odd jobs and such."

Morley winked at Gordon, and Gordon nodded, "Okay."

"He'll take it. You see, Brad, I told you; she has a heart like a balloon," mused Morley. "Room for everybody."

"When do I start?" asked Gordon.

"You can work at once if you want to," said Miss Drussel, "We can use another handy-man. You report in the basement to a gentleman named Mr. Travers. Say I sent you. He'll give you a uniform, and explain what you must do."

In the basement, Gordon met Mr. Travers and put on a white uniform. He welded his introduction to that affable gentleman, who showed Gordon through the hospital, which he termed, "my ranch."

He showed Gordon all; its outer buildings and huts, its offices, private doctors' and nurses' residences, even its engine room.

From the lawn, Gordon saw the buildings, all of them huddled together, resembling the nucleus of a miniature city. A neatly trimmed lawn spread like green velours on all sides of the buildings, with here and there a lofty elm, spruce or pine stationed in leafy splendor like an island rising in an emerald sea.

There was one building removed from the others. It was the largest of the out-buildings, and appeared to be composed of nothing but screens and windows, exposed to the full sweep of the tangy mountain air.

"What's that?" Gordon inquired. "It's all separated from the others. What do those patients have in that building?"

Travers smiled, "They got what most people who come to Denver want to get cured of . . . tuberculosis."

In Travers' office, Gordon filled a card and announced his readiness for work.

"I guess you can begin by cleaning room G7; it's your room," Travers said, pushing him into the elevator.

"Here we are, number seven," Travers said, opening a door leading into a small room.

"We're quite crowded here right now with new cases, the young fellow who had this room last was fired the other day."

His work was light — moving beds, opening windows, cleaning. By late afternoon he had finished his first day's work and was eating dinner at the hospital cafeteria.

In the evening he visited Morley, hoping to strengthen the thin bond of friendship established between them. One thought played through his mind, to make Morley slip — talk — about what Gordon wanted to know—his past.

Gordon's visit was pleasanter, a bit more intimate than his first visit. Morley seemed interested in Gordon's duties, took on a slightly proprietory air, as though Gordon were his own hireling or protege. And while they talked, smoked and played cards.

The next day, Gordon again went to Morley's room. This time during his own lunch hour. He was there a few minutes when Doctor Burns entered the room, making his usual round of the second floor. He was with the floor nurse, Miss Landrigan.

"Well, Mr. Morley, you look fine today," said the doctor jovially.

"Do I? All I want to know is —when do I get out of here?" Clifford said.

"Well, I don't know that yet; you must have patience. It's not that cut on your forehead that worries us. It's your head."

Morley was annoyed and disappointed, and he showed his irritation.

"I'll give you another week to cure it, but that's all," he warned.

The same night, soon after dinner, Gordon went to Morley's room.

"How's the hiding getting on?" asked Morley with forced humor. "Any sign of the cops?"

"None," answered Gordon. "This white suit has thrown them off my trail."

"Good, break open some of that brandy. Close the door and get the cards out." Gordon did as he was told.

Morley cursed his hand. He played one card at a time. First he would review the cards, then lay them face down on the bed, and play them, pushing them up from memory. He seldom missed.

When he had drunk enough brandy, he forgot the pain in his hand, and used both for the game. Gordon played and let Morley talk. The room was heavy with smoke.

Morley flicked open his heavy coruscated gold case, the same one with the diamond monogram that Gordon had seen him use when they met that first night at the "Gold Nugget."

Gordon took the proffered cigaret and lifted the case.

"Nice," he observed. "Diamonds or rhinestones?"

"The real stuff. You don't know much about jewels, if you think these aren't genuine!"

"Yours?"

"Sure, why do you even ask that?"

"The diamond monogram on it is 'A. M.' Shouldn't it be C. M.?"

"The 'A' stands for Audrey, the name of the girl who gave it to me. I married her back East after Mrs. Morley No. 1 died. She was as rich as hell and wild about me—and still is. She wanted me to remember her every time I took out a cigaret."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A CHANCE THAT PAYS

An "almost stopper," such as three cards headed by a jack or a doubleton queen, or perhaps four little cards, may be considered enough to hazard a No Trump game contract, in preference to a minor suit game, if your partner has indicated pretty fair general strength. That is especially true if your hand is of a balanced pattern, containing no very pronounced suit-length value or any ruffing advantages such as are afforded by a singleton or void suit. Taking 11 tricks at a minor is in such cases a greater gamble than chancing your partner's having the cards that turn your quasi-stopper into a positive one.

	♠ 7 5 ♥ Q 8 7 ♦ A K 10 9 3 ♣ A 10 4
♠ Q 8 3 2 ♥ A 5 4 ♦ 7 5 4 ♣ J 7 3	N W E S	♠ K J 10 9 ♥ K 10 9 2 ♦ 8 ♣ 9 8 6 2
	♠ A 6 4 ♥ J 6 3 ♦ Q J 6 2 ♣ K Q 5

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	5 ♦

No matter what South tried on this deal, he could not make his contract after West led the diamond 4. There was bound to be one loser in spades and two in hearts, and the defenders got them, to beat the contract a trick.

After the 3-Diamonds by North, South, with his evenly balanced hand, positive stoppers in spades and clubs, and almost a stopper in hearts, should have bid 3-No Trumps. His reason for not doing so was his fear of the heart suit. North's big bid, however, which could not possibly be based entirely on diamond strength, but had to guarantee a certain amount of power in other suits, made it extremely likely he held something in hearts. Even the Q and a single guard would have been enough, or four to the 10, or possibly any four at all, possibly even any two if the longer opponent had no more than four. As it is, nine tricks could not have been stopped.

Your Week-End Lesson.

What do veterans of the game mean when they speak of a "combination tenace?" Can you give an example of one with which the declarer can finesse by leading the suit himself? Also an example of one which will work to his advantage only if he can force a defender to lead the suit to him? Can you recall or construct a single hand in which both are exemplified in different suits?

Most of the high schools round about appear very happy over recent coaching appointments, but none of them quite so happy as Shelby where the Whippets have picked up two mentors of known ability in a step indicating they intend to keep pace with the North Central Ohio league.

Tommy Bender, one-time Ashland college gridder who'll handle the football coaching duties at Shelby, made a fine reputation for himself in this section of the state while coaching at Mt. Gilead, before going to Logan, and his old friends will be glad to welcome him back to the N. C. O. area.

Lawrence Swackhamer, ex-Ohio university star, takes over the basketball coaching job at Shelby after a year of rest from athletic activity.

He coached the Mt. Vernon high school cage team in 1940-41, a campaign that goes down in Yellow Jacket history as the worst tough luck season in the school's history.

The Jackets lost 15 out of 19 starts that season, but no one blamed Swackhamer since most of the defeats were by margins of less than four points.

He's a brother of Nolin Swackhamer, who coached Glenford to the state Class B basketball title in 1941.

Newark high school also is happy over the promotion of Max Douglas, former Denison university star, from a junior high school athletic post to basketball mentor of the Wildcats to succeed Clifford E. (Red) Orr, now an ensign in the Coast Guard.

Douglas is credited with developing many of the stars who have made Newark a power in Ohio high school basketball circles in the past dozen years, and Newark fans believe he'll continue in the role of star maker as mentor of the 'Cats.

Eddie Mutryn, Mansfield's home run king in the Ohio State baseball league last summer, did all right for himself in that recent Northern league all-star game.

Ed got a single and double in four trips, and drove in two runs, but his all-star aggregation lost the verdict to the Winnipeg club.

Bob Kuzava's latest pitching record for Charleston in the Mid-Atlantic league as given in this week's Sporting News is 14 victories and four defeats. But since then Bob lost a 1-0 game for his fifth defeat.

CLAIMS FERGUSON CORNERS HURLERS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, who has one of Ohio's outstanding softball teams, was accused yesterday of "cornering" two of the city's ace hurlers.

Rival Sponsor George C. Bobb, in a letter published in the Columbus Dispatch, charged that Warren Gerber and Clyde Kirkendall, members of the Ferguson Auditors and employed in Ferguson's office, had been forbidden to pitch for other teams.

Ferguson wasn't available but a spokesman commented:

"They're just jealous."

Redskins Hand One To Macks

Four Unearned Markers Give Athletics Victory.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Athletics, who are in the cellar anyway, where one contest up or down is of little moment, found some generous country cousins last night in the persons of the Cleveland Indians, who in the comparative solitude of Cleveland stadium separated themselves from a baseball victory by a score of six runs to four.

But the A's were not altogether perfect, either.

Robert L. Johnson, an outfielder in the employ of Connie Mack, distinguished himself by clouting a home run in the fifth inning, his 11th of the year, to give the A's three of their runs.

His performance was slightly beclouded, however, by the fact that he never would have reached the batter's box in that inning had it not been for an error by Jim Hegan upon the occasion of a sacrifice bunt by Mike Kreevich.

The inning before, Philadelphia had come into possession of three runs, on a single a fly which transformed itself into a double by being misjudged twice by Oris Hockett, an error by Ray Mack, another single and an error by Roy Weatherly.

The net result was that four of the visitors runs were unearned, though gratefully received, and Cleveland dropped a game behind the second-place Boston Red Sox.

Only 5,422 customers, the smallest crowd in this city's five-year history of night baseball, attended the game.

The Indians-Athletics game originally scheduled for today has been combined with Sunday's contest to create a double-header.

Ray Robinson Beats Angott

Earns Title Chance But Probably Won't Get It.

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK — (AP) — Without taking a thing away from Sammy Angott and his "good old college try" at Ray Robinson, it occurs to Gus Fan today that it's about time Freddie-the-Red Cochrane took his welterweight championship out of cold storage so Ray could at least get a soc. at it.

Ray may not be the greatest fighter ever to come down the pike, but the Harlem Hammer came from far back, after losing the first three rounds, to punch Angott around for a ten-round decision last night in the Garden—in spite of the best performance Sammy ever gave in these parts. And with that victory, witnessed by 12,073, Ray has just about cleaned up the entire lightweight and welterweight divisions.

The win was his 33rd in a row as a professional, his 122nd straight in an unbeaten career including his amateur days.

He is slated to take a shot at Cochrane on Sept. 10, but Freddie, now a sailor boy, will leave his welterweight title safely in port when he goes to the post.

And since Ray not only has swept up everything in sight under 147 pounds—he scaled 144¼ to Sammy's 139¾ last night—but has done it in a manner that leaves no room for argument, you figure it's about time Cochrane put his title on the line. After all, titles are won—and lost—in the ring, and the best man is supposed to be boss.

Red won the bauble from Fritzie Zivic exactly a year ago last Wednesday. Just about all commissions—including the Scandinavian—say a champ must prove he's still the head man every six months. However, titleholders in the armed forces were given a moratorium on this.

MEET FOR TITLE

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Sidney B. Wood, jr., of Southampton and Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., meet today for the Meadow club's Round-Robin tennis championship.

FAIR OR FOUL

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK — Baseball teams in other cities — and other branches of sports, too—can take a lesson from owner Horace Stoneham of the New York Giants in the matter of raising money for the army emergency relief. Followers of the Giants haven't had much to crow over in recent years, but they can really get up on the fence and let loose in full voice over the club's efforts in behalf of the service fund with the game coming up Monday night.

Stoneham expects a $100,000 gate!

This will be the last relief game in the National league, seven having been played already. The American league still has two of its eight to go.

* * *

The main thing that Stoneham has engineered, aided and abetted by Manager Mel Ott, is to bring about appearance on the mound of Van Lingle Mungo for this encounter with the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers. That means this game will attract everybody in Brooklyn with the price of a subway ride to the Polo grounds and the wherewithall for a ticket.

Van Lingle used to be the No. 1 hurler of the Dodgers as you may have heard, and has just been brought in from the minors by the Giants.

With Mungo on the mound for the Giants against the Dodgers the game is one of the great naturals that could be arranged for this part of the country—meaning Brooklyn and New York.

Against the Dodgers he will have a chance to clinch a place in the affections of the Giant supporters, for they don't ask much more of a pitcher than that he beat the Dodgers. Mungo undoubtedly would get particular delight in doing just that, as all players would. They like nothing better than an opportunity to beat the ears off a club that let them loose.

Mungo came to fame as one of the great fireballers of all times when he was with the Dodgers, but his conduct at times mitigated against his reaching the heights that seem to be within easy reach of his powerful arms. He perpetually was jammed up one way or another. But for that he undoubtedly would still be a Dodger instead of a Giant and a bitter foe of the National league-leaders.

The game should draw $100,000 as Stoneham expects if for no other reason than Mungo is going to pitch against French, not to mention that the money is for one of the greatest of causes.

Blue Ribbon Field Winding Up Meet

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me.—(AP)—A blue ribbon field of harness horses compete on the Kite track here today in a virtually all-stake program winding up a two weeks' grand circuit meet.

* * *

The 20-event get-away card, for which 92 horses have been nominated, will include a $6,000 trotting derby, four national colt stakes, a free-for-all pace, a classified trot and a classified pace.

* * *

The card, perhaps the greatest single day's light harness racing in the sport's history in this country, is the result of accumulation of events through cancellation several times the past week because of poor weather.

Travelers Win Series From VFW

Stage Comeback After Spotting Six Runs.

Mansfield Travelers spotted Willard V. F. W. baseball club six runs in the first inning of their rubber game at the Fairground last evening, then bounced back to win the ball game and the three-game series 7 to 6.

It was the same score by which Willard defeated the Travelers at Willard Sunday.

Travelers got a run back in the first, added two more in the fourth, and tied the score at 6-6 with a three-run rally in the fifth. They had to wait until the eighth before pushing over the deciding marker.

* * *

Pat Patterson, limiting Willard to five hits over the route, hurled shutout ball after the opening stanza.

Tomorrow afternoon the Travelers will be at the Fairground again, meeting the Bucyrus Moose at 2:30. Bob "Windy" Winbigler will be on the hill for the Mansfielders.

MARION —(AP)— Harding high school's football coach, William O. Williams, has quit to become football-basketball mentor at University school, Columbus.

Mungo Returns to Big Time

Former star pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Van Lingle Mungo, above, now is with the Giants, having been purchased from Minneapolis, where Mungo was pitching good ball. The Giants used Mungo in the first game after he joined the team but the Cubs beat him.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—Connie Mack comes up with the idea that the major leagues will have to reduce their player limits next season "for the simple reason that there won't be enough players." . . . Connie figures that such a reduction, particularly in pitching staffs, will improve the game. . . . Pacific Coast league tried cutting the limit this year and about the only result was a phony "suspension" every time a player was hurt so another guy could be put on the active list. . . . Our idea is that enough minor leagues will fold up before next summer that there will still be a plentiful supply of players still out of the army but that the clubs likely will have to take a few that wouldn't ordinarily be major leaguers.

FEMININE FIGURES.

Bob Hooey of the Ohio State Journal tells one about a feminine baseball fan who protested that his story of a game had credited the Columbus pitcher with too many strikeouts. . . . Bob looked up his score book and verified that Preacher Roe had whiffed eleven rival batsmen that particular night. . . . "Yes, he did," admitted the fan, "but at the same time he struck out twice himself. So doesn't two from eleven leave nine?" . . . Maybe she had something there.

SERVICE DEPT.

Capt. Joe Dasher of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., speaks seven languages and has a working knowledge of 13 others, which makes him a pretty valuable man to the army intelligence department. . . . But so far he hasn't had much use for still another language which he has used for ten years calling the plays to football scribes in the Pitt stadium press box. . . . Lake Russell, former Mercer U. football coach now stationed in Iceland, got the surprise of his life recently when he approached a sentry and instead of hearing the usual "Who goes there?" the challenge was "Hello, coach, pass by." . . . Sure enough, the sentry was a Georgia boy.

Millers Halt Toledo Hens

Then Take Time Out to Meet Great Lakes Club.

(By Associated Press)

At this point in the torrid American association pennant chase the four first division teams are bunched within 2½ games of each other and the only one of the foursome daring to take time out today is Minneapolis, now perched in third place.

* * *

The Millers are meeting the Great Lakes Naval Training Station after whipping out a double victory over Toledo last night to move within two games of the pace-setting Kansas City Blues. The rest of the field failed to goin in yesterday's action.

While Minneapolis was stopping the Mud Hens, 5 to 2 and 5 to 4, the Blues divided a doubleheader with Louisville; second-place Milwaukee split a pair with Indianapolis, and Columbus lost a single encounter 2 to 1 to St. Paul to slip from third to fourth.

Kansas City racked up a 3 to 1 victory in the opener against Louisville, and took a loose 10-7 decision in the nightcap.

Milwaukee lost the first game to Indianapolis, 6 to 4, but the Brewers put on some heroics to win the second, 8 to 7, scoring five runs in the final three frames.

FINDLAY GOES AHEAD WITH GRID SCHEDULE

FINDLAY — (U.P.) — Findlay college today made plans for a 1942 football schedule of nine games, with Athletic Director Nelson Jones taking over the coaching duties in the absence of Coach Lee Graves and Assistant Howard Bliss, who are in the armed service.

Findlay's schedule: Sept. 19, at Dayton; Sept. 25, Ohio Northern; Oct. 3, at Kent State; Oct. 9, at Muskingum; Oct. 16, Bluffton; Oct. 24, at Capital; Oct. 31, at Naval Training Station, Oxford, O.; Nov. 7, at Otterbein; Nov. 13, Bowling Green State.

Despite its high and mountainous interior, Costa Rica has more than a million acres under cultivation, more than six million acres of cattle-grazing land.

Whirly Goes for Another Purse

CHICAGO—(AP)—This is the race in which Whirlaway expected to match noses at the finish with Alsab. But the game little Alsab was on the sidelines until Monday's opener at Washington park and today's $25,000 handicap, closing event on a 36-day program at Arlington, was between the long-tailed Whirly and "eight other horses."

* * *

A total bankroll of $31,600 was in the offing, if all nine horses start. Whirlaway's all-time earnings of $454,336 had a chance to be swelled by an additional $24,000 should Warren Wright's perennial champion come through again today.

* * *

By admission of Trainer Ben Jones, a fellow who ought to know, Whirlaway was in tip-top shape for the Arlington windup. But anxious to test this declaration were Rounders, which finished second to Whirly in the Massachusetts handicap; Sirocco, 1940 Arlington classic winner; Louis B. Mayer's Reading II, No Competition, Startetor, Pumpgun, Best Seller and Equitable.

CHARLESTON SPLITS WITH SPRINGFIELD

CANTON — (AP) — The battles for second and fourth places in the Mid-Atlantic league have reached the hands-changing stage.

A game and a half separate second-spot Erie from third-place Dayton, while fourth-place Canton has only a half-game edge on Springfield. Dayton defeated Erie 2 to 0 last night and meets the Sailors again tonight. Charleston and Springfield divided a doubleheader, Springfield taking the opener 2 to 1 and the Senators the second 4 to 0. Zanesville defeated Canton 3 to 2.

COACH RETIRES

MINNEAPOLIS — (INS) — Sig Harris, who started his football career at Minnesota in 1901 and since graduation has served his alma mater as a scout and coach, today announced his retirement.

Twi-Night Twin Bills Pain Yanks

Baseball Before Supper Cramps Champs' Style.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

TWI-NIGHT" doubleheaders, baseball's wartime contribution to the working man, may mean a boost at the boxoffice for most of the teams, but they're a pain in the neck to the New York Yankees.

This unnatural distortion of the national pastime is particularly displeasing to the Yankees for the simple reason that they find themselves now and then on the short end of the scores.

In their own park, equipped with all the modern conveniences except a set of lights, the Yankees do about as they please. But in recent westward journeys, the champs have bumped into bargain bills that start before supper.

Possibly the bombers still were mumbling over their double defeat at Chicago in one of these newfangled affairs Wednesday night, when they took the field at St. Louis yesterday to play the Browns in one game at 5 p. m. and a second at 8:30.

At any rate, they blew a five-run lead as the Brownies handed them their third straight loss, 9-8, and then had to call on Spurgeon Chandler to put an end to such foolishness by blanking the Browns on three hits in the afterpiece, winning 8-0 and running his consecutive shutout innings to 23.

The Boston Red Sox cut the Yankees' American league lead to a dozen games by nipping the Detroit Tigers, 7-6, in an afternoon game and the Cleveland Indians dropped a full game behind the second-place Red Sox when they bowed to the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-4 in a night affair.

Seven-hit pitching by Johnny Humphries carried the Chicago White Sox to a 7-2 triumph over the Washington Senators in another night contest, with Myril Hoag hitting a triple and double and Taft Wright a triple and single.

* * *

In the only game played in the National league, the Cincinnati Reds tightened their grip on third place by bumping the Boston Braves, 5-2, on a three-hit pitching job by Gene Thompson.

Two games, the St. Louis Cardinals against the Giants at New York and the Pittsburgh Pirates against the Phils at Philadelphia, were postponed.

LEAHY NAMED

CHICAGO—(INS)—Coach Frank Leahy, who piloted Notre Dame's undefeated grid team in 1941, today was named midwestern coaching representative for the All-Star 11 which will meet the Chicago Bears Aug. 28 at Soldier field.

Spiders have eight eyes, yet they do not need to rely on this good eyesight to spin their webs. Their touch is so sensitive that they can weave their delicately designed webs in total darkness.

Here's a frog that must have thought it was a short summer. Ole Johnson of Royal Nebraska, was in an ice house sawing up cakes of ice. He noticed one with a dark object in it, which closer inspection proved to be a frog. Johnson put the cake in the sun, it melted, and the frog soon began to blink, stretch, and hop about.

The United States government now uses carrier pigeons which should not be captured killed or delayed, as war service might be impeded. They all wear leg bands, and if you find one injured, the police should be notified at once. If one happens to visit your premises, let it go, and it will likely be on its way again, after a little rest.

Swimming is not only a healthful sport, but an easy way to get cooled off when Old Sol blazes down. Men, you'll enjoy your swim more if you're wearing Gantner Swim Trunks, because they are good looking, fine fitting and provide the utmost freedom in action. You can buy them at Yuncker's, in Lastex, all wool or several new fabrics, in a wide range of pleasing colors, priced from $2.50 up.

Fish thrive on sawdust! Hatchery men have included sawdust, principally for roughage, in the diets of fish, and have found that it reduces mortality. The fish seem to flourish on it, growing only a little less rapidly than those fed on more conventional diets.

A newspaper is said to preserve the natural color of fish better than anything else. Just carry some with you and the nice specimens you want to show your friends will keep splendidly if wrapped in damp newspaper before putting them in your creel.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.—(U.P.)—A young seal, accompanied by its mother, swam the Santa Barbara channel from Santa Cruz island and attached itself to an army group here.

It attached itself especially to Pvts. Mike Milobar and Martin Collins. They have repeatedly thrown it back into the sea, it invariably comes back to them.

They have named it Oscar and all it does is to demand about 50 baths a day, administered by sousing it with buckets of water, which it enjoys vociferously.

FRIDAY RALLY EXTENDED BY STOCK MARKET

Rail Issues, Bethlehem and U. S. Rubber Advance In Short Session.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The stock market today extended its Friday rally by fractions.

On the advancing side were Atlantic Coast line, Baltinmore & Ohio, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Bethlehem Steel, N. Y. Central and U. S. Rubber.

Searchers for trend clues noted the federal estimate that sales of wholesalers were 11 per cent above the like 1941 month but it was the smallest upturn recorded for 19 months except for the 7 per cent increase shown in May. Sales for the first half topped the same period last year by 23 per cent.

Studied also was the survey of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association which disclosed both production and new orders in this industry for the week ended July 25 were less than in the corresponding week a year ago.

Salvaged British Sub Now Has A Brilliant Record

LONDON —(INS)— The British submarine Thunderbolt, formerly the Thetis, which sank and carried 99 men to death during its trial runs in Liverpool Bay in 1939, has just returned to a British port after more than a year of successful actions at sea.

Five months after she went to the bottom in 1939 the Thetis was salvaged. Later she was put into service under her new name.

At the end of her most recent voyage, the Thunderbolt's "Jolly Roger" recorded destruction of two enemy U-boats and five supply ships. Its markings also told the story of six bombardments and gun actions against enemy positions—one of which was an Italian fortress.

In addition, the Thunderbolt saved 43 merchant seamen from death in the Mediterranean.

The submarine is commanded by Lieut. Commander Cecil B. Crouch. Men of the British Navy call him "Lucky" Crouch.

He left the British submarines Seahorse and Swordfish shortly before each was lost.

HOROSCOPE

FOR SUNDAY, AUG. 2

Sunday's horoscope holds auguries for very favorable and pleasant activities suitable to the relaxations, enjoyment and sociability of the holiday. The spiritual and intellectual faculties are under impetus to accomplishments of a high order in Sabbath meditation, inciting to writings, preaching and profound teachings.

Those whose birthday it is may have an enjoyable and profitable year, with the intellectual and social talents under excellent stimulus for doing successful work in either direction. Writings, particularly of a serious or serviceable quality, art, music, not forgetting business publicity or newspaper work, are bound to be lucrative.

A child born on this day should have much versatility, with its pen and in speech, inclining to writings of wide diversity, being idealistic and optimistic as well as serious minded.

FOR MONDAY, AUG. 3

Monday's astrological augury is a rather conflicting one, with much of promise of achievement in launching major activities under high tempo, but with lack of support or approbation from superiors, employers or the public. Nevertheless, industry and sterling character should break down such resistance.

Those whose birthday it is, although they might encounter opposition and total lack of cooperation from superiors and the public or community, may by force of indomitable will, skill, ingenuity, originality, perseverance and patience succeed in putting over projects of very high order. There may be much nervous strain and emotional upset, but there may be social, domestic and affectional satisfactions.

A child born on this day should have excellent constructive ability, energy, ingenuity and skill.

Doctor Invents Tiny Typewriter For The Blind

SACRAMENTO, Cal. —(INS)— A small and compact typewriter for the blind has been invented by Dr. Alfred E Banks, a San Diego physician.

Weighing but 18 ounces, the tiny machine has satisfactorily passed many tests.

The typewriter is designed to punch Braille in a four-inch tape thus enabling the typist to "read" what he is typing.

It consists of six levers, each representing one of the "dots" of the braille system. Instead of punching holes through a slate with a stylus, as was the former method, the blind person merely presses lightly on the keys, using both hands This provides a quick and easy operation

600 RAF PLANES IN FIERCE RAID ON DUSSELDORF

Pour Incendiaries, Explosive Bombs on Heart of Nazi Industrial Area.

lighted the whole area, the British heavy bombers swept to their targets at Dusseldorf, a war industry center second only to Essen in the whole of Germany, and rained bombs, including 4,000 pound block busters.

Early reports said that the attack was most successful.

In the target area were great factories and blast furnaces, including the Mannesmann iron and steel works, the Rhenish-Westfaelisch steel works and the Borsig steel works.

Some planes were detailed to attack the important inland port which lies at the city's center. From it hundreds of tons of iron and steel products are transported daily up and down the Rhine to feed industries in other areas.

Dusseldorf is the headquarters and administration center for the German steel industry in addition to being a most important site for armaments and heavy engineering plants. It was last raided heavily Dec. 27 last year.

Planes of the fighter command in their overnight raids attacked two big railroad freight assembly yards and shot up six locomotives drawing freight trains.

Fighter sweeps were made in which railroads, canal bridges and coastwise shipping were attacked to disorganize German transport.

Unofficial reports said that the heavy bomber raid on Dusseldorf was the biggest in several weeks.

For a full 60 minutes, the British planes loosed bombs on the metallurgical, engineering, machinery, glass and chemical industries of Dusseldorf, its paper, enamel, weaving, spinning, silk, dyestuffs, furniture and brewing factories, the great railroad bridges spanning the Rhine and the docks at which big steamships can be accommodated

Tens of thousands of incendiary bombs and a tremendous weight of high explosives, were dropped by long range heavy bombers including Stirlings with their eighton bomb capacity.

Germany made but one small raid during the night, in which one bombing plane was downed The German planes attacked Hull and damaged a number of homes with explosive and incendiary bombs

Hundreds of fighter, fighter-bomber and light bomber planes had raided German occupied territory throughout yesterday, with Douglas bombers and the American Eagle squadron of the RAF prominent.

U. S., RAF Bombers Batter Axis Bases

CAIRO — (INS — In what was described as "a big night," American and RAF bombers battered Axis bases at Tobruk and along the Egyptian Mediterranean coast Thursday, it was disclosed today. At the same time planes of the Royal navy hammered at Mersa Matruh, starting fires that were visible for thirty miles. Direct hits were made on a small cargo ship in the harbor.

The American and RAF bombers blasted Axis airdromes at Fuka and on the Sidi Haneish escarpment between Mersa Matruh and Daba. While poor visibility made it difficult to observe results, the whole series of raids was believed to have caused heavy damage.

Air Raids Drive Out 20,000 Germans

LONDON —(AP)— The Polish telegraph agency reported today that RAF raids on western Germany had driven 20,000 Germans to take refuge in Poznan, Lodz and other centers of occupied Poland. Several trains arrive daily with refugees, and 1,800 children and 700 mothers recently reached Poznan alone, it said.

Montreal is the only "ocean port" one thousand miles from the sea.

Offers Program For Modernizing Of Rural Schools

STATE COLLEGE, Pa —(INS)— The little red schoolhouse can bring its reading classes up to date just as easily as schools in urban districts, according to Lois Clark, adviser of early childhood and elementary education in the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction.

Miss Clark recommended three ways to bring about improvement in reading in rural schools: (1) reclassify pupils according to their ability, (2) teach reading in other subjects as well as in "reading class," making sure that pupils are familiar with words found in geography, health and history textbooks, (3) encourage more free, voluntary "reading for fun" from other books which interest the pupils.

War Has Changed Former Views Of College Students

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—(INS)— Since Pearl Harbor college students are thinking more seriously about current problems than ever before, according to Dr Clifford R. Adams, assistant professor of psychology at the Pennsylvania State college.

Both men and women students have become more liberal about social security legislation and about applying psychology in the solution of industrial and social problems, Dr. Adams found after analyzing a test given to 520 college students from five universities.

In addition to national problems, men students are thinking a great deal about such personal problems as drinking, profanity, gambling, disasters of installment buying, and sex attraction as a poor reason for marriage, Dr. Adams said.

The star sings a number of her famous hillbilly songs in the picture while Brown highlights his performance with a comic impersonation of Hitler. Anne Jeffreys and Eddie Foy, jr., are in the cast.

SECRET AGENT X-9

X-9 AND SAVANNAH SUCCEED IN ELUDING PRINCE CAESAR AND HIS MEN.
PRINCE CAESAR! LOOK! SOMEONE IS TURNING THE FUEL TRUCK AROUND! IT'S ON FIRE!
IT'S HEADED FOR THE BARN! IF THAT GAS EXPLODES, THE BOMBERS WILL BE WRECKED!
WITH A FLAMING GASOLINE-SOAKED ROPE TRAILING FROM THE FUEL TANKS, X-9 LEAPS FROM THE SPEEDING TRUCK.
A MOMENT LATER, IT SPLINTERS INTO THE HUGE BARN, HOUSING THE AXIS BOMBING PLANES...
FOR A BRIEF INSTANT—QUIET—THEN THE ROPE WICK IGNITES THE GASOLINE INTO A ROARING INFERNO OF FLAME!
CURSE THAT G-MAN! ..AND WE SPENT FOUR MONTHS SMUGGLING THOSE BOMBER PARTS INTO THE COUNTRY!
NO USE TO WHINE! THE POLICE WILL BE HERE IN A FEW MINUTES! TO THE CAR!
X-9! ARE YOU HURT?
I'M OKAY SAVANNAH .. I TOOK A NASTY SPILL, JUMPING OFF THAT TRUCK!
WE'VE WIPED OUT ADOLF'S AMERICAN AIR-BASE .. NOW WE'VE GOT TO NAB PRINCE CAESAR AND HIS RATZIS!
HERE COMES A CAR!
THE G-MAN AND THE GIRL ARE BY THAT BARN! DRIVE PAST THEM — THEY WILL PAY DEARLY FOR THEIR DRAMATIC HEROICS!
MEL GRAFF
IT'S PRINCE CAESAR! HE'S MAKING HIS GET-AWAY!
DOWN, SAVANNAH! THEY'RE TOSSING LEAD!
YOUR LEG— YOU'VE BEEN HIT!
IT'S NOTHING! GET TO A 'PHONE AND TELL THE FBI TO HAVE THE STATE POLICE BE ON THE ALERT FOR PRINCE CAESAR'S CAR!
NOT ALL OF HIS MEN WERE IN THAT CAR...HE MUST HAVE LEFT SOME OF THEM BEHIND TO DESTROY ALL TRACES OF THEIR PLANS FOR SABOTAGE.
MEANWHILE...SAVANNAH FLAGS AN APPROACHING CAR.
STOP! PLEASE STOP!
MEL GRAFF
NO HITCH-HIKERS, MA'AM! AGAINST REGULATIONS!
NO...WAIT! THERE ARE SABOTEURS IN THAT CAR AHEAD!
IT'S NOT A GAG! I'M A SPECIAL AGENT FOR OUR GOVERNMENT... YOU'VE GOT TO BELIEVE ME!
WELL, TAKE IT EASY...THIS ROAD LEADS TO AN ARMY CAMP! YOUR PALS WILL BE BACK!
MAYBE THIS IS THEM, NOW!
BE CAREFUL! THEY'VE GOT GUNS!
AS PRINCE CAESAR'S CAR ROARS BY, A BURST OF PISTOL FIRE FELLS ONE OF THE SOLDIERS...
OH-H!
MEL GRAFF
THANK HEAVEN! HERE'S AN ARMY TRUCK!
HEY, YOU MEN! GET THIS SOLDIER TO THE INFIRMARY! I'M GOING AFTER THE GUYS WHO SHOT HIM!
WHO DID YOU SAY THOSE RATS WERE?
AXIS AGENTS! THEY PLANNED TO BLITZ WASHINGTON FROM THE AIR! CAN'T YOU GO FASTER?
PRINCE CAESAR! THE ARMY CAR IS GIVING CHASE!
THAT PASSENGER TRAIN HAS STOPPED FOR WATER! WE'LL ABANDON THE CAR AND BOARD THE TRAIN!
BUT A BULLET FROM X-9'S GUN HAS DRAINED THE GAS TANK.. THE CAR STALLS ON THE SOUTHBOUND TRACK.
HERE COMES ANOTHER TRAIN! JUMP!
MEL GRAFF
WELL, MA'AM, I GUESS THOSE RATS GOT WHAT THEY RATED! THE TRAIN CREW PICKED 'EM BOTH OUT OF THE CINDERS — DEAD!
BOTH? BUT.... THERE WERE THREE!
UNAWARE OF THE ACCIDENT ON THE SOUTHBOUND TRACK, THE PASSENGER TRAIN HAS LEFT THE SCENE.....
..WITH PRINCE CAESAR ABOARD!
MEL GRAFF

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY

I'M NOT GONNA CRY ANY MORE, ZERO – I WAS BAWLIN' YESTERDAY, AN' LAST NIGHT I COULDN'T SLEEP–
NOW I GUESS I DON'T HAVE ANY TEARS LEFT, BUT I GOT THE WIM-WAMS SOMETHIN' TERRIBLE AN' I FEEL BAD ALL OVER–
I'M ALL MIXED UP–THE FIRST TIME MRS. CACKLE SAW ME, SHE HUGGED ME AN' CALLED ME DARLIN' AN' SAID I WAS JUST THE KIND OF A LITTLE GIRL SHE WANTED TO ADOPT–
BUT YESTERDAY, MRS CACKLE TOLD MR OLIVER SHE CHANGED HER MIND AN' WANTED A KID WITH BLUE EYES AN' GOLDEN HAIR–AN' THEN SHE SAID TO ME, "GOODBYE, DEAR, DON'T YOU WORRY," AN' THEN SHE WENT AWAY
DARRELL McCLURE
HI, OLIVER – WHAT'S WRONG? YOU LOOK AS THOUGH YOU LOST YOUR BEST FRIEND– I RECKON YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO BE A MITE UPSET, TURNING THIS WHOLE PLACE OVER TO THE GOVERNMENT
FOR VICTORY BUY UNITED STATES WAR BONDS AND STAMPS
–AFTER ALL THE YEARS YOU SPENT– –WORRYING AN' WORKING TO–
THANK YOU FOR YOUR SYMPATHY, MR MAYOR – I AM TOO OLD TO FIGHT, SO I AM PROUD TO BE ABLE TO DO SOMETHING TO HELP OUR COUNTRY
I'M UPSET, BECAUSE I DIDN'T LOSE ONE OF MY BEST FRIENDS – A THOUGHTLESS WOMAN PROMISED TO ADOPT LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY– THEN, FOR NO APPARENT REASON, THE LADY CHANGED HER MIND
THAT WOMAN MUST HAVE BEEN INSANE – I KNOW ANNIE – SHE'S–
DARRELL McCLURE
NOW DON'T WORRY ANY MORE, ANNIE– YOU'RE LUCKY THAT OLD SCATTER BRAIN CHANGED HER MIND, AFTER SHE PROMISED TO ADOPT YOU–
THAT SORT OF FEATHER BRAIN–
I GUESS IT WASN'T HER FAULT, 'CAUSE IF I HAD BLUE EYES AN' GOLDEN HAIR, EVERY THING WOULD BE SWELL
LOOK ZERO! HERE COME SOME MORE ARMY TRUCKS, ALL LOADED WITH STUFF SOLDIERS USE
THE COOK SEZ THEY'RE GONNA MAKE A GREAT, BIG CAMP AN' THOUSANDS AN' THOUSANDS OF SOLDIERS ARE COMIN' HERE TO LIVE–
AN' IT MAKES ME FEEL GLAD ALL OVER, 'CAUSE I LOVE SOLDIERS – THEY'RE STRONG AN' BRAVE AN' THEY'RE FIGHTIN' FOR OUR COUNTRY
AN' I'M GLAD MR OLIVER GAVE THEM THIS SWELL PLACE TO LIVE AT – EVEN IF I DON'T KNOW WHERE I'M GONNA LIVE, AFTER THE SOLDIERS COME
DARRELL McCLURE
GEE, MR OLIVER, BUT IT'S GRAND! YESTERDAY, ALL THE GROUND WAS EMPTY AN' NOW IT'S ALL COVERED WITH LOVELY LITTLE CANVAS HOUSES FOR OUR SOLDIERS TO LIVE IN– – IT'S JUST LIKE MAGIC – THE SOLDIERS PUT UP A HOUSE AS EASY AS MOST FOLKS PUT UP AN UMBRELLA – IF I WAS A MAN, I'D WANNA BE A SOLDIER
I UNDERSTAND JUST HOW YOU FEEL, ANNIE – IF I WERE THIRTY YEARS YOUNGER, I – BUT IT'S NO USE DREAMING ABOUT WHAT WE WOULD LIKE TO DO –
ALL WE CAN DO IS HONOR AND ADMIRE THE MEN WHO ARE FIGHTING FOR US– AND DO EVERYTHING IN OUR POWER TO HELP THEM TO WIN A GLORIOUS VICTORY–
DARRELL McCLURE
HONEST, ZERO– I GOT THE WIM-WAMS SOMETHING AWFUL–, 'CAUSE NOBODY WANTS TO ADOPT ME
FOR VICTORY BUY UNITED STATES WAR BONDS AND STAMPS
I HEARD MR OLIVER TELLING A MAN HE WAS VERY ANXIOUS TO FIND A GOOD HOME FOR ME – BEFORE THE SOLDIERS TAKE OVER THIS WHOLE PLACE –
BUT I GUESS NOBODY WANTS ME– I WISHT MR OLIVER WOULD COME BACK – HE'S BEEN GONE ALL DAY AN' I THINK HE'S TRYIN' TO FIND SOMEBODY TO ADOPT ME–
DARRELL McCLURE
MOST ALL THE OTHER KIDS WERE ADOPTED – AN' MAYBE MR. OLIVER WILL FIND SOMEBODY WHO WANTS ME – HE'S TERRIBLE SMART, SO I'M GONNA KEEP ON WISHIN' AN' WISHIN' AWFUL HARD
NOW DON'T YOU GO WORRYING YOUR LITTLE HEART OUT, BECAUSE YOU'RE THE ONLY CHILD LEFT HERE IN MR OLIVER'S PLACE–
SNAP
IT'S KINDA LONESOME, BUT I KEEP PRETENDIN' EVERYTHING'S GONNA BE OKAY
THAT'S RIGHT, ANNIE – KEEP YOUR CHIN UP–
I'VE LIVED LONG ENOUGH TO KNOW THAT MOST FOLKS SPEND THEIR LIVES A-WORRYING 'BOUT THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN– MY STARS! I'LL HAVE TO HURRY OR I'LL MISS MY BUS
